TURKS & CAICOS

August is always a special time in the Hamptons. Summer is at its peak, making it the perfect season to spend a relaxing day at the beach, unwind by the pool, or simply appreciate the beauty that surrounds us. I encourage you to unplug from the digital world for a while and let real life unfold.

Wellness continues to be a priority for so many people, and the Hamptons offers endless opportunities to embrace a healthy lifestyle. On weekends, I enjoy tennis, exercising, and spending time outdoors. Whether you're looking to meditate, take a yoga class, paddleboard across calm waters, cycle scenic back roads, or simply enjoy a peaceful walk, you'll find countless ways to recharge both body and mind. The East End also offers exceptional opportunities for sailing, horseback riding, golf, fishing, and a wide variety of other outdoor activities.

August is also a season of generosity. Throughout the Hamptons, charitable organizations continue to host fundraising events that strengthen our community and support important causes. Among them, Stony Brook Southampton Hospital holds a special place. It provides world-class medical care to residents and visitors alike, especially during emergencies, and remains an essential part of life on the East End. If you're able, I encourage you to support its mission by making a donation at southamptonhospital.org.

With Labor Day coming soon, make the most of these long, sun-filled days!

"Summer is not measured by the days we keep,
but by the moments that linger long after the season has gone."

I've found myself thinking less about how quickly the season passes and more about what remains. The unplanned adventures that stay with you. The conversations that make you feel supported and seen. The excitement that begins the moment you step onto the polo field. The memories made on a beach walk as well as the laughter that fills a table of friends over dinner. There are far too many to name, but these are the moments that become the true measure of summer.

This issue celebrates the people who continue to shape the spirit of the season with creativity, generosity, and style. From inspiring conversations and remarkable achievements to extraordinary gatherings that remind us why this community is so special, these pages capture the energy that makes summer on the East End unlike anywhere else.

There is something deeply comforting about traditions returning each year, while new stories quietly find their place beside them. Whether it's discovering a new favorite restaurant, celebrating an important milestone, supporting a meaningful cause, or simply lingering over dinner long after the sun has set, these experiences become what we carry with us long after summer has ended.

As always, thank you for inviting Social Life to be part of your summer. It is a privilege to tell these stories, celebrate this extraordinary community, and preserve the moments that make each season unforgettable.

Here's to savoring every conversation, every laugh, and every memory still waiting to be made.

With love,

Devorah Rose

Sky Blue Takes Flight

Sky blue has stepped into the spotlight this summer, offering a softer alternative to the season's usual neutrals. Designers including Tom Ford, JW Anderson, and Valentino have embraced the shade in everything from clean, tailored looks to fluid, romantic silhouettes that evoke an airy optimism. The color works just as well in a monochromatic outfit as it does paired with crisp white, butter yellow, or rich chocolate brown. Whether you choose a flowing dress, a structured blazer, or a sleek accessory, sky blue brings an inviting freshness to any look.

The Art of Camp

This summer, fashion leans into camp with playful, unexpected, and impossible to ignore accessories. From the theatrical touches seen on the runways of Balenciaga and Marc Jacobs to everyday statement pieces, it's all about injecting personality into your wardrobe. The easiest way to embrace the trend is with one standout accessory—a sculptural heel, a tiara-inspired necklace, or an oversize charm that instantly elevates even the simplest outfit. Think polished with a wink: bold, expressive, and just the right amount of over-the-top.

TIFFANY ZHOU

THE OLEADA FOUNDER ON ENGINEERING A SMARTER LUXURY HANDBAG

By Cass Almendral

Tiffany Zhou

The strap snapped on the floor of JFK. Laptop, chargers, a full working day scattered across the terminal tile. Tiffany Zhou felt embarrassment, then irritation, then the thing founders live for: clarity. "I did not see a brand," she says of that moment of inspiration. "I saw a failure." But not hers. The failure belonged to an industry still designing for a woman who no longer exists.

Zhou walked away from her career in private equity to build Oleada, a versatile collection of large work bags for women. At first, the verdict at home was brutal. Four degrees, thrown away to sell handbags? Her early investors, mostly men, wondered aloud why a world with Hermès needed another bag maker. She found the sentence that ended the argument. "We are the female version of Tumi." Not decoration. Equipment.

She trained as an engineer and never went to design school, which she regards as an edge. To Zhou a bag is a system of weight, movement, and ergonomics, held to a standard most designers would find hard to accommodate. Beauty has to work. "A good bag," she says, "should not ask for attention. It should give you back attention."

Then came the part that nobody really discusses. Oleada's Marina Bucket bag sold three months' worth of inventory in one month, and the win went to Zhou's head. Fresh off a raise, she chased it: A glossy Los Angeles shoot, pastel colorways, imagery that looked like it conveyed growth. But loyal customers got confused and started asking whether Oleada was pivoting to resort bags. "This was one of my biggest mistakes," she says with zero spin.

Out of the wreckage came the line every founder should take to heart. "A best seller is not a brand." A best seller proves you touched demand. But a brand tells the customer exactly who you are. Expansion without that clarity does not grow the enterprise; it erases it.

So she pulled back to the woman she built Oleada for, and the tastemakers arrived without being paid to. Maye Musk. Susan Rockefeller. Pauline Brown. Fern Mallis. Women who have seen every logo and respond only to a fresh point of view.

Eighty countries later, Oleada's showroom lands in NoMad in New York, and the thesis holds. Not quiet luxury—practical luxury. The bag works for the woman. Never the reverse.

THE LUXURY ACCESSORIES BRAND BRINGS SPANISH CRAFTSMANSHIP TO SOHO

By Alie Mitchell

Spanish luxury accessories brand PARIS/64 has opened its first international flagship boutique in New York, bringing its refined aesthetic and commitment to exceptional craftsmanship to the heart of SoHo.

Founded in 2019, PARIS/64 has quickly established itself as a contemporary voice in luxury leather goods. Every handbag and accessory is handcrafted in the brand's own atelier in Illueca, Zaragoza, Spain, where skilled artisans oversee each step of the process—from the first sketch to the final stitch. The result is a collection that celebrates the artistry of Spanish leatherworking through a modern lens.

Rather than designing for the moment, PARIS/64 focuses on creating pieces with lasting appeal. Defined by clean silhouettes, premium materials, and meticulous attention to detail, the collections balance timeless style with everyday functionality. It is an approach that resonates with those who value craftsmanship and thoughtful design over passing trends.

Located at 465 Broadway, the SoHo flagship reflects the brand's understated sensibility. The boutique offers visitors an immersive introduction to the PARIS/64 world while showcasing its full collection of handbags and leather accessories. Beyond shopping, the space has become a destination for intimate styling appointments and gatherings that bring together editors, stylists, creators, and clients.

The New York opening marks an important milestone for the growing Spanish label as it expands its presence in the United States. While the address may have changed, the philosophy remains the same: creating beautifully crafted pieces that emphasize quality, authenticity, and enduring design.

ALBERTO LUZZI BRINGS ITALIAN CRAFTSMANSHIP TO THE EAST END

By Marsin Mogielski

Alberto Luzzi, Nic Canal

Alberto Luzzi is a contemporary jewelry house rooted in the artistry of Rome and the energy of New York. Blending traditional Italian craftsmanship with a modern downtown sensibility, the brand creates expressive, handcrafted designs that are both sculptural and effortlessly wearable.

Each collection features earrings, necklaces, bracelets, and rings crafted in sterling silver and 18-karat gold vermeil, incorporating intricate metalwork, woven wire, filigree detailing, and carefully finished surfaces. After more than 20 years in the jewelry industry, designer Alberto Luzzi has developed a signature aesthetic that celebrates individuality while honoring the heritage of Italian artisanship.

In the fall of 2025, Luzzi and business partner Nic Canal opened the Alberto Luzzi boutique at 102 Thompson Street in SoHo, creating an intimate space where jewelry is viewed as part of everyday personal style rather than something reserved for special occasions. The brand is also preparing to introduce a new collection of solid gold designs featuring diamonds and emeralds.

I consider Alberto a friend whose positive spirit is as magnetic as his designs. I enjoy spending time at his SoHo boutique, where lively evenings unfold among beautiful jewelry, great music, and a chic, sexy, and stylish crowd. His jewelry has also become part of my everyday wardrobe. More often than not, I am wearing one of Alberto's rings and a bracelet. His designs have a remarkable way of elevating even the simplest look.

This summer, Alberto Luzzi brought that same creative energy to the 2026 Hamptons Jewelry Show in Southampton, where the brand welcomed collectors, clients, and guests during the show's opening-night preview. Visitors had the opportunity to meet Alberto and experience the craftsmanship behind his latest creations, including the Aima 18-karat gold vermeil lariat necklace with gold mesh, the Aurora statement cuff bracelet featuring amethyst, and the Dune dangle earrings with kyanite.

Alberto Luzzi's creations are rooted in craftsmanship, individuality, and understated luxury. In in SoHo or Southampton, with influences from both Italy and New York, the brand continues to create jewelry that feels personal, modern, and designed to become part of the wearer's signature style. Trust me—you will enjoy it!

THADEN

WHERE ART MEETS LUXURY

By Alie Mitchell

Kristina Thaden at the Thaden showroom at Harrods in London

Ashley Park in Emily in Paris

Some handbags are designed to complement an outfit. Thaden's are designed to spark conversation. The Swiss luxury accessories brand has quickly distinguished itself with sculptural silhouettes that blur the line between fashion and art, creating pieces that are as expressive as they are functional.

For founder Kristina Thaden, the journey began not with fashion but with a sketchbook. Years of drawing inspired by sculpture, movement, and human emotion eventually evolved into handbags that challenged traditional notions of luxury. While manufacturers initially deemed her unconventional designs too complex to produce, she remained committed to finding the artisans capable of bringing her vision to life.

That determination continues to define the brand today. Rather than designing around trends or logos, Kristina creates handbags that begin with an idea, a gesture, or an emotion. Her work is deeply influenced by the Japanese philosophy of Ma—the meaningful space between things—a concept that appears throughout the collection. In pieces like The Whole, the negative space is just as important as the leather surrounding it, creating sculptural forms that are both modern and timeless.

Before launching Thaden, Kristina built careers in both theater and corporate management, experiences that continue to shape her approach to design. Theater taught her to observe emotion, movement, and human connection, while business provided the discipline to transform creative ideas into a luxury brand. Together, they have informed a design philosophy where artistic expression and technical precision exist in equal measure.

That distinctive perspective is resonating internationally. Three Thaden designs recently appeared in Emily in Paris, while presentations at Harrods have introduced the collection to a growing audience seeking originality over excess. Yet despite the momentum, Kristina remains intentional about the brand's future.

"I don't want Thaden to be everywhere," she says. "I want it to be present in places where art, design, and fashion meet, and where craftsmanship and individuality are truly valued."

For Kristina Thaden, luxury is not defined by logos or fleeting trends, but by thoughtful design, exceptional craftsmanship, and objects created to be treasured for years to come.

YOUR EYES OUT EAST

By Ruby Saracino

Ruby Saracino is a New York City and Montauk based lifestyle lifestyle creator, marketer, and tastemaker whose content follows the rhythm of summers out East and life in the city. Whether she's documenting the latest hotspots, wellness routines, or behind the scenes moments, her content feels like an invitation into the places everyone wants to be. She recently went viral after her surprise cameo with Lil Yachty at The Surf Lodge, with the moment reaching millions across Instagram and TikTok and cementing her as one of the summer's breakout creators.

MY FAVORITE EVENT TRENDS RIGHT NOW

Wellness isn't slowing down. If anything, it's getting bigger. Brands are moving beyond just sponsoring workouts and are building entire experiences around fitness: Pop Up Wrkout in Amagansett Square (with more dates in August), VUUM x Hero Beach Club with Makena Diehl, Nylon Members x Fuze House, The League x Madison Appel, and Kith x New York Pilates.

Sports are not just for the boys. As the Knicks run in the NBA finals and the exciting matches of World Cup proved, people actually want to gather around live sports again. Montauk has fully leaned into it, with spots turning games into nightly programming. Surf Lodge x Poly Market and Barlume's watch parties are great examples of brands meeting people where the excitement already is.

Brands are taking over the food scene. Cafés and restaurants continue to be some of the best places to show up organically. Instead of traditional pop-ups, brands are partnering with local favorites to create experiences that feel native to the space. Crown Affair x Montauk General Store, Roxanne Assoulin at FINI Pizza, and Cowboy Colostrum at Left Hand all nailed this.

The surprise performance is back. Whether it's a brand event or a nightlife moment, everyone is trying to create that "you had to be there" energy. Lil Yachty at Surf Lodge, and Sheck Wes at Montauk Project all turned already buzzy events into something people couldn't stop posting about.

WHAT I'M LOOKING FORWARD TO

Mix and Mahj is bringing mahjong nights to Mary Lou's every Wednesday in August from 6 to 9 p.m. The first hour is dedicated to beginners looking to learn the game, followed by open play and guided play for newer players from 7 to 9 p.m. Whether you're just learning or already love to play, it's the perfect midweek tradition.

The Surf Lodge is keeping its iconic summer concert series going with two major performances. Jack Harlow on August 22 and Teddy Swims on September 6, bringing these can't-miss nights of live music to Montauk.

Organic Oren is heading east. After building a cult following in Los Angeles, they're bringing their first ever East Coast pop up to Montauk General Store for a weekend residency August 28–30. It's exactly the kind of brand that makes sense out east, and I have a feeling it'll be one of the most talked about pop-ups of the summer.

DR. SUE DECOTIIS

THE ART OF LIVING WELL

By Laura Hearst
Photography By Marsin Mogielski

One of Dr. Sue Decotiis's earliest memories has nothing to do with medicine.

It begins on Christmas morning, when she was 4 or 5 years old. Her father had gone out on Christmas Eve to run a few last-minute errands when he spotted a department store preparing to close. In the holiday display sat a revolving Christmas tree stand, one that transformed an ordinary tree into something almost magical. Refusing to give up, he knocked on the locked doors until someone answered. They finally handed him the display stand simply to send him on his way.

The next morning, Sue woke to a Christmas tree that shimmered, glimmered, and slowly turned in the corner of the room. As the ornaments caught the changing light, they reflected a kaleidoscope of color that seemed almost dreamlike, creating a sense of wonder that has stayed with her ever since. Today, she experiences that same feeling while watching the late afternoon sun set over her East Hampton home. She believes the extraordinary light of the East End is unlike anywhere else, particularly in the fall, when cooler evenings produce breathtaking sunsets that seem to illuminate everything around them.

"It was magical," she recalls with the same sense of wonder she felt as a little girl.

It is the perfect introduction to the woman behind a Madison Avenue practice that has become a trusted destination for patients seeking regenerative and metabolic medicine. Whether she is welcoming patients into her office or friends into her East Hampton home, Sue has spent a lifetime creating experiences that leave people feeling lighter, calmer, and more optimistic than when they arrived.

That philosophy extends well beyond medicine.

On summer weekends, guests stepping through the front door of her East Hampton home are often greeted by an unexpected soundtrack. Instead of soft jazz or classical music, the speakers might be playing '90s hip-hop while Sue moves comfortably between the kitchen and dining room, preparing dinner and greeting friends.

"They're shocked," she laughs. "Some of them probably think about leaving."

Before long, however, the music changes. French pop from the 1960s begins to fill the house, followed by Serge Gainsbourg, Argentine tango, and the sophisticated sounds of another era. Candlelight flickers across vintage crystal inherited from her great-grandmother. The table is inviting rather than formal, elegant without ever becoming intimidating. Every detail has been thoughtfully considered because, as Sue puts it, "I want people to feel transported."

Spend time with her away from the office and you quickly discover that curiosity has always been her greatest teacher. She collects ideas the way others collect souvenirs. A handcrafted cordial discovered in Buenos Aires. An extraordinary vinegar spirit found in Florence. Espelette pepper carried home from France's Basque region after learning about the tiny village where it has been cultivated for generations. Every trip becomes an opportunity to discover something unfamiliar, then share it with the people around her.

Those discoveries inevitably find their way to the dinner table. A simple seafood dish becomes Mediterranean with olive oil, garlic, tomatoes, and herbs. The following weekend, the very same ingredients might take on a French personality with butter, shallots, and white wine. Another gathering brings fresh ginger, lemongrass, lime, and chile, transforming the meal into something inspired by Thailand.

She often shares these same recipes with patients who are working to improve their metabolic health or lose weight. Rich in protein, naturally low in carbohydrates, and remarkably simple to prepare, they demonstrate that healthy eating never has to feel restrictive. By changing only the herbs, spices, and seasonings, the very same ingredients become an entirely different meal.

The comparison naturally extends to medicine. Just as carefully selected ingredients create harmony in a recipe, Sue believes treatments should work together with the same sense of balance and synergy. That philosophy eventually inspired her body-skin-tightening product called Sculptisse, which has a patented peptide complex to create a synchrony of bioactive ingredients.

After years practicing internal medicine, Sue found herself increasingly frustrated by a health-care system that often managed disease instead of restoring health. Too many patients accumulated medications while continuing to struggle with fatigue, changing weight, disrupted sleep, and the feeling that they no longer recognized themselves.

Rather than accepting those limitations, she asked more questions.

Long before obesity medicine, hormone optimization, and GLP-1 therapies entered the mainstream, Sue was already studying their potential. She recognized that lasting health required looking beyond symptoms and understanding the complex relationship between metabolism, hormones, nutrition, and lifestyle.

Yet ask her what she finds most rewarding, and she rarely begins with science.

Instead, she remembers a patient who returned after treatment, paused for a moment, and quietly said, "I haven't felt this optimistic in 20 years."

Those words have never left her.

Helping someone sleep through the night again matters. Helping them regain energy matters. Helping them feel confident enough to wear a sleeveless dress after significant weight loss matters too. But helping someone rediscover hope may be the greatest reward of all.

That same philosophy guides every aspect of her work. Rather than chasing quick cosmetic fixes, she became fascinated by ingredients that encourage the skin to regenerate naturally, helping the body produce more of its own collagen and hyaluronic acid. Like so much of her practice, the goal is not to overpower nature but to remind the body what it already knows how to do.

She has owned her East Hampton home for more than two decades, returning throughout the year. The house itself reflects that appreciation for place. The living room, which she affectionately calls the "Venetian Room," was inspired by the weathered plaster walls she admired while wandering through Venice. Soft washes of aqua and blue shift throughout the day as sunlight moves across the room. Beyond it is the "Tuscan Room," grounded by reclaimed European tile in rich earth tones that recall the Italian countryside. Stone floors run throughout the main level, chosen not only for their timeless beauty but also for the practical realities of living.

She is fascinated by the glacier that shaped eastern Long Island thousands of years ago, creating the fertile soil that continues to define the region today. It explains, she believes, why the East End has become synonymous with remarkable farms, exceptional produce, and an appreciation for ingredients that are allowed to speak for themselves. She speaks with equal enthusiasm about the changing seasons. Winter brings crisp air and quiet roads. Spring arrives with the first blossoms. Autumn offers brilliant sunsets and a stillness that restores her after the pace of Manhattan. Summer has its own unmistakable energy, but she is just as happy enjoying the East End long after the crowds have gone home.

Her favorite mornings often begin in the calm waters of Gardiner's Bay. While she enjoys the ocean and occasionally heads to Indian Wells Beach, it is the bay that calls her back. The water is warmer, the pace is gentler, and she can simply step outside, swim, and let the day unfold naturally.

SCULPTISSE™
BODY CONTOUR CREAM

Her appreciation for the East End extends naturally to its culinary traditions. One of her favorite restaurants remains Nick & Toni's. She loves its farm-to-table philosophy, the kitchen garden, the herbs and vegetables grown on the property, the wood-fired pizza, and the beautifully prepared whole fish that celebrate the region's extraordinary bounty.

When she is entertaining at home, a stop at Stuart's Seafood Market in Amagansett is almost second nature. She picks up fresh shellfish and seafood for dinner parties or one of the market's prepared cedar plank salmon fillets when friends arrive unexpectedly for lunch. Hospitality, in her world, is about making people feel welcome, comfortable, and completely at ease.

Her Chocolate Labrador, Cleet, was adopted through ARF, the Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons, an organization she deeply admires for its tireless work rescuing and caring for animals across the East End. Named after the Roman emperor Diocletian, he lives up to his regal title with boundless enthusiasm, endless energy, and just enough mischief to keep everyone on their toes. Sue laughs as she recalls finding him standing on the kitchen table, a feat that convinced her he needed more than the occasional obedience lesson. At the time of our conversation, Cleet was away at what she jokingly calls "sleepaway camp," an intensive training program she hoped would channel some of his exuberance without diminishing the joyful spirit that made her fall in love with him.

Whether she is discussing regenerative medicine, planning a dinner party, or describing the changing light over Gardiner's Bay, she approaches the world with genuine curiosity. She delights in introducing friends to unfamiliar music, unusual ingredients, and stories gathered from her travels. She laughs easily, asks thoughtful questions, and continues searching for better answers, both in medicine and in life.

MARGIT BRANDT PRESENTS
PALM BEACH HOME OF THE MONTH

1053 N. LAKE WAY, PALM BEACH, FLORIDA

By Laura Hearst

Margit Brandt

A NORTH END MASTERPIECE THAT DEFINES MODERN PALM BEACH LIVING

In Palm Beach, exceptional homes are defined as much by their setting as by their architecture. At 1053 N. Lake Way, the two come together beautifully. Situated on an oversize 0.36-acre lot on one of the North End's most desirable streets, this meticulously crafted estate offers over 7,000 square feet of living space, combining timeless design with the effortless indoor-outdoor lifestyle that has long made Palm Beach one of the world's most coveted destinations.

Completed in 2016 and designed by architect Michael Perry, the residence was built to an uncompromising standard of quality. Every room reflects careful planning, exceptional craftsmanship, and an appreciation for enduring design rather than passing trends. The thoughtful floor plan is centered on flexibility, with a three-bedroom main house complemented by a completely separate two-bedroom guesthouse. Together, they create an ideal arrangement for extended family, visiting guests, live-in staff, or anyone who values both generous gathering spaces and complete privacy.

Inside the main residence, bespoke craftsmanship is evident at every turn. A richly appointed library provides a warm and inviting retreat, while a climate-controlled 1,300-bottle wine cellar is certain to impress collectors and entertainers alike. Throughout the home, custom architectural details create interiors that are elegant without ever sacrificing comfort. Among the home's most memorable features are the dining-room doors, originally sourced from the New York Public Library. They are an extraordinary design element that brings a remarkable piece of history into the residence while adding character and a sense of timelessness that cannot be replicated.

The outdoor living spaces are every bit as compelling as the interiors. Surrounded by lush, meticulously maintained landscaping, the estate unfolds into a series of beautifully designed destinations for relaxing and entertaining. Elegant loggias provide shaded retreats throughout the day, while multiple alfresco dining areas make everything from intimate family dinners to larger celebrations feel effortless. A vibrant bougainvillea-framed swimming pool serves as the centerpiece of the grounds, complemented by a tranquil bonsai garden and a welcoming firepit that invites guests to linger long after sunset. Every outdoor space has been thoughtfully planned to embrace Palm Beach's year-round tropical climate.

The location further elevates the property's appeal. Situated on prestigious North Lake Way, the home enjoys convenient beach access via Via Marila to some of Palm Beach's most sought-after stretches of sand. Laurie Lane also provides discreet service access, a valuable feature that enhances the home's functionality while preserving its elegant streetscape. It is a rare combination of beauty, convenience, and practicality that is increasingly difficult to find.

Move-in ready and impeccably maintained, 1053 N. Lake Way represents the very best of modern Palm Beach living. It successfully balances architectural distinction with everyday livability, offering the privacy of a family compound, the craftsmanship of a custom-built estate, and one of the island's premier North End addresses. Every detail has been carefully considered, from the home's intelligent layout to its exceptional finishes and resort-inspired outdoor spaces. For buyers seeking a turnkey residence that embodies sophistication, comfort, and timeless appeal, this remarkable estate presents an extraordinary opportunity to enjoy Palm Beach at its finest.

ROSS SCHOOL
THE FUTURE STARTS HERE

By Kaiya Hilton

Wil Weiss

On the East End of Long Island, where tradition often defines the landscape, one school has spent more than three decades redefining what education can be.

Founded in 1991 by educator Courtney Sale Ross, Ross School has never been interested in following a conventional academic playbook. Instead, it was built around a bold idea that seems even more relevant today than it did at the school's founding: The world is interconnected, so education should be too.

Serving students from early childhood through grade 12 (day and boarding) across two campuses in Bridgehampton and East Hampton, Ross challenges students to think beyond individual subjects, encouraging them to connect ideas across science, history, technology, the arts, culture, and global perspectives. It is an approach designed not simply to prepare students for college but for lives of curiosity, adaptability, and purpose.

That philosophy has become increasingly important as today's students enter a world reshaped by artificial intelligence, rapid technological advancement, and unprecedented global connectivity. While many schools are only beginning to rethink how they educate the next generation, Ross has spent decades cultivating critical thinking, collaboration, creativity, and problem solving as core elements of everyday learning.

Leading the school's board of trustees is Emily Tisch Sussman, whose connection to Ross is both professional and deeply personal.

A nationally recognized strategist, entrepreneur, podcast host, and co-owner of Gotham FC, Sussman is also the parent of three Ross students. That dual perspective allows her to see the school through the lens of governance while experiencing its impact firsthand as a parent.

"As board chair and a Ross parent, I see every day what makes Ross different," she says. "This is a school that challenges students to think boldly, care deeply, and become fully themselves. It doesn't ask kids to fit into a mold—it helps them discover what they're capable of."

Her own career has been defined by navigating complex challenges, building partnerships, and embracing change, qualities she believes mirror the educational experience Ross offers its students.

Unlike more traditional academic models, Ross breaks down barriers between disciplines. A lesson in history may naturally lead into environmental science. Art can become a vehicle for exploring mathematics or engineering. Students are encouraged to ask bigger questions, examine multiple perspectives, and recognize that the most meaningful solutions often emerge where disciplines intersect.

That spirit extends well beyond the classroom.

Athletics, performing arts, wellness initiatives, outdoor education, leadership opportunities, and community engagement and service are woven throughout the Ross experience, reflecting the school's commitment to educating the whole child. Small class sizes and individualized attention allow faculty to know each student personally, creating an environment where academic excellence and personal growth develop hand in hand.

Ross also occupies a unique place within the East End community.

While deeply rooted in Bridgehampton and East Hampton, the school attracts families from across Long Island, New York City, and around the world through its day and boarding programs. The resulting mix of cultures, experiences, and perspectives creates a learning environment that feels simultaneously local and global, exposing students to ideas and viewpoints that extend far beyond the classroom walls.

Today, Ross continues to build on the vision that has distinguished it for more than three decades.

Under the leadership of head of school Tom Sturtevant, enrollment has grown, academic offerings have expanded, athletic programs continue to strengthen, and the school has invested significantly in campus improvements, technology, wellness initiatives, and student life. Throughout that growth, Ross has remained firmly committed to the values that have always defined it: personalized learning, intellectual curiosity, and an unwavering belief in every student's potential.

For Sussman, preserving that balance between innovation and mission remains one of the board's highest priorities. "Our job is to protect what has always made Ross exceptional while making sure our students are ready for the future," she says. "The world will keep changing. Our commitment to developing resilient, creative, compassionate young people won't."

As independent schools increasingly compete to define what a modern education should look like, Ross stands apart by refusing to separate academic achievement from personal development. Success is measured not only by college acceptances but by the confidence students build, the questions they learn to ask, the relationships they form, and the sense of purpose they carry into the world.

For families seeking more than a traditional education, Ross offers something increasingly rare: a school that continues to evolve while remaining deeply rooted in the values that have defined it since the beginning.

On the East End, that legacy continues to shape not only students but the future itself.

CASA MILLI

IT ALL STARTED WITH A GARDEN

By Amee Liliana

Ever since I can remember, the garden has been my favorite place to be.

Naming our home Casa Milli after the most special little soul in my life—my Yorkie, Milli—felt like the most natural thing in the world. Those who know us know we've never spent a day apart. She is gentle, kind, endlessly loving, and my greatest blessing.

At the time, Casa Milli was simply the name of our home.

I've moved my vegetable garden more times than I can count, and somehow it gets bigger every year. What started with a few raised beds has grown into tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, zucchini, watermelons, herbs, and whatever else I decide to grow that season. I don't think a garden is ever really finished. Every year I find another reason to expand it.

Peonies have always been my favorite flower, so naturally a peony garden came next. Every spring I tell myself I have enough. Every spring I end up planting more.

Chiqui became part of our family a few years later and instantly filled our home with happiness. She is tiny, curious, endlessly entertaining, and somehow manages to have the biggest personality in the house.

As Casa Milli continued to grow, we added chickens. I have a habit of naming just about everything, and many of my hens are named after remarkable women I admire, including Ruth, Oprah, Grace, Elizabeth, and Cher. Every one of them has a personality all her own.

Every morning they reward us with beautiful jewel-toned eggs in shades of blue, green, olive, and cream, each one with a deep-orange yolk. Collecting them never gets old.

I brought bees to Casa Milli to help the gardens flourish. I quickly became fascinated with beekeeping and wanted to learn everything I could. What started as another hobby eventually became our honey harvest. Around the same time, we planted a small apple orchard, another project that simply grew out of my curiosity.

Looking back, that's how almost everything at Casa Milli has happened. One interest naturally led to another.

Years later, I recreated the Colombian ají, a fresh, vibrant hot sauce I grew up eating. Naming Chiqui's Ají was an easy decision because it reminded me so much of her. Bright, bold, full of personality, and with just the right amount of spice.

Hot Honey came next. If Milli is sweetness and Chiqui is spice, it couldn't have had a more fitting inspiration.

More recently, we introduced a daily multivitamin for dogs, inspired by the two little girls who have been at the heart of Casa Milli from the very beginning.

The happiest part of all of this has never been growing the vegetables, collecting the eggs, or harvesting the honey. It's sharing the things that bring me the greatest joy with the people I love. For years, friends and family have left our home carrying a carton of eggs, a jar of honey, vegetables from the garden, or, more recently, a bottle of Chiqui's Ají. I've always loved making those gifts feel special. Beautiful glass jars, thoughtful labels, and careful packaging have always been just as important to me as what goes inside them.

I realized I wasn't simply sharing eggs, honey, or vegetables. I was sharing little pieces of the place that brings me the greatest happiness.

I don't think I ever created Casa Milli.
I planted a garden.
Everything else simply grew.

Hamptons Summer Hair

By Jeanette Zinno

Elle Medico

As summer settles into the Hamptons, protecting your hair becomes just as important as protecting your skin. I sat down with Elle Medico, co-founder and stylist at UMI Salon in Manhattan's Flatiron district, who spends part of each summer seeing clients out east, to talk about the biggest warm-weather hair mistakes—and the simple habits that keep hair healthy all season long.

What's the biggest challenge your clients face during a Hamptons summer?
Color fading and dryness, without a doubt. Blondes are especially at risk of turning green from chlorine, while brunettes can fade into brassy tones. Salt water pulls moisture from the hair, leaving it rough and dry after a weekend at the beach.

How do sun, salt water, chlorine, and humidity each affect the hair differently?
The sun damages the outer cuticle, causing dryness and fading. Salt water strips away natural moisture, chlorine dehydrates hair and can oxidize blonde tones, and humidity makes the hair shaft swell, leading to frizz.

What's the biggest mistake people make?
Jumping into the pool or ocean without protecting their hair first. A leave-in treatment or hair mask creates a barrier that helps keep chlorine and salt water from stripping moisture and color.

What's your ideal summer hair routine?
Keep it simple: a moisture-rich shampoo and conditioner, an anti-humidity styling product, and a weekly hydrating mask. After a day in the sun, focus on restoring moisture with nourishing treatments.

UMI Salon co-owners Amerah Underwood, Andrew Inconstanti, and Elle Medico

How can clients keep color-treated hair looking fresh?
UV protection is essential. Products formulated to protect against sun exposure help preserve color, minimize brassiness, and keep hair looking vibrant all summer.

What's one piece of advice everyone should remember?
Prevention is everything. Enjoy the beach, the pool, and the sunshine—just protect your hair first.

ARE YOU MISSING OUT ON THESE 7 NATURAL TIPS FOR GLOWING SKIN?

By Liana Werner-Gray,
Nutritionist and Author
Photography by Leanna Carlson

Summer is the perfect time to let your natural beauty shine, and healthy, glowing skin starts from within. While the beauty industry wants us to believe we need dozens of expensive products, I've found in my last 17 years of being a health coach and nutritionist to thousands of clients that radiant skin comes down to nourishing your body with the right foods, minerals, and daily habits. Here are my go-to seven favorite ways to support healthy skin all summer long.

Liana Werner-Gray

1. Start your day with chlorophyll.

One of my favorite morning rituals is adding liquid chlorophyll drops to filtered water or enjoying a fresh green juice. Chlorophyll, the green pigment found in plants, is packed with nutrients and has long been used to support the body's natural detoxification processes. It's also known as "nature's internal deodorant." I've been taking liquid chlorophyll daily for over 17 years, and I truly believe it's one of the reasons my skin stays fresh and vibrant.

A daily shot of wheatgrass is a great way to get a dense dose of chlorophyll. Did you know that a shot of wheatgrass is equivalent to 2.5 pounds of vegetables? Remarkable! You can get fresh organic wheatgrass delivered in the Hamptons from 800wheatgrass.com.

2. Eat your water.

Hydration doesn't come only from what you drink; it also comes from what you eat. Many fruits and vegetables are naturally rich in water, helping hydrate your body while supplying vitamins and antioxidants your skin loves. Watermelon is about 92% water, cucumber 96%, celery 95%, strawberries 91%, oranges 86%, and tomatoes 95%. Fill your plate with these hydrating foods, especially during the warmer months, to nourish your skin from the inside out.

3. Cleanse from the inside with food-grade bentonite clay.

Food-grade bentonite clay is a natural volcanic ash that has been used for thousands of years by cultures around the world to help purify the body. When mixed with water, it has the ability to bind to certain substances in the digestive tract and support the body's natural elimination processes. Many of my clients struggling with acne and eczema choose to include Redmond bentonite clay as part of their wellness routine. A common starting point is 1 teaspoon mixed into a glass of water once daily, following the product directions and ensuring adequate hydration. It can also be applied topically as a face mask to help absorb excess oil and leave skin feeling refreshed.

4. Be mindful of what you put on your skin.

Your skin is your body's largest organ, so think carefully about what you apply to it. I like to follow a simple philosophy: If you wouldn't want to eat it, think twice before putting it on your skin. Many conventional skin-care products contain long lists of synthetic ingredients, fragrances, and preservatives that can irritate sensitive skin. Instead, look for simple, nourishing ingredients and remember that healthy skin is built from within—not from an overflowing bathroom cabinet. Too many chemicals age the skin.

5. Choose clean makeup.

If you wear makeup, opt for products made with skin-friendly ingredients. I personally love Araza Beauty because it's made with organic, superfood-inspired ingredients while still providing beautiful coverage. In fact, I'm wearing Araza makeup in the photograph accompanying this article. Araza's concealer and lip tint are two of my everyday favorites because they enhance your natural beauty without feeling heavy on the skin. Use my code, Liana, for a discount.

6. Feed your skin with anti-inflammatory foods.

Beautiful skin begins on your plate. My philosophy, the Earth Diet, focuses on whole, nutrient-dense foods that naturally support collagen production and reduce inflammation. This way you eat a lot of collagen-supporting proteins like bone broth, wild-caught fish, and pasture-raised eggs as well as antioxidant-rich berries, leafy greens, and colorful vegetables to help protect against oxidative stress and healthy fats like avocado, extra-virgin olive oil, and omega-3-rich foods to support your skin's natural barrier. These are the best-known foods for the skin.

7. Replace the minerals you lose.

During summer we sweat more, losing important minerals along with water. Replenishing electrolytes helps your body stay hydrated and your skin looking its best. Choose products like Redmond Real Salt electrolytes made without artificial colors or flavors; they are delicious and refreshing. Staying hydrated with both water and minerals can make a noticeable difference in how you look and feel.

This summer, remember that glowing skin isn't about perfection—it's about creating consistent healthy daily habits. Nourish your body, hydrate well, choose real food, and let your natural radiance shine from the inside out.

CHAZ DEAN'S SOFTEST LAUNCH YET

By Jeremy Murphy

Chaz Dean and his angels

For more than 25 years, Chaz Dean has built a beauty empire around the deceptively simple idea that care should feel nurturing. The celebrity hairstylist and founder of WEN turned cleansing conditioner into a category-changing product; expanded into bath, body, skin care, fragrance, men's, kids, home, and pet care; and became one of QVC's most recognizable beauty personalities. Now Dean is taking that same philosophy somewhere softer, furrier, and very personal: dog beds.

The WEN Pets Ultra Plush Faux Fur Dog Beds are not a random lifestyle extension. For Dean, they are the result of decades of frustration as a dog owner.

"I've had dogs for the past 25 years, and I bought so many dog beds," Dean says. "I've never been satisfied with any."

Dean says the closest he came to loving a dog bed was a Restoration Hardware faux-fur version, but even that, he says, only worked aesthetically. "The looks of it were good," he says, "but the structure was not."

So, in classic Chaz Dean fashion, he started tinkering.

"I would always open them up, and I would add pillows inside of them," he says. "I would add three king-size pillows." Even then, he says, the support was never right. "A king-size pillow never measures up to memory foam."

THE WEN DOG BED

Beauty, comfort, structure, and function became the foundation of the new WEN pet beds. Dean says he spent roughly two years developing the beds, testing samples, changing materials, adjusting colors, and watching how dogs actually used them. The result is a plush faux-fur bed with 3.5 inches of memory foam, thick bolsters, washable construction, and waterproof liners.

"That is the number-one thing for every dog that I've ever gotten," Dean says of the base support. "It's what they lay on, their 100-pound bodies or 80-pound bodies. It's hard on their knees, their hips, and their joints."

WEN by Chaz Dean

The bolsters were another key element. Dean wanted dogs to have real support for their necks and heads, not the flimsy edging he had seen in other beds. The small bed has an 8-inch bolster, while the medium and large beds have 9-inch bolsters.

"I took what drove me crazy about all the ones I've ever had, and I've constructed this," he says. "I'm really proud of them, and they're so beautiful, soft, and even cooling."

Dean tested the beds with his own dogs, including his nearly 13-year-old lab, Riley, as well as with dogs belonging to friends, family, and colleagues. One early oversize sample went home with an employee whose Bernese mountain dog typically avoided beds because he ran hot, and he immediately loved it.

COMFORTABLE NOSTALGIA WRAPPED IN FAUX FUR

The softness, he says, was inspired by a memory of old rabbit-fur keychains from his childhood, though Dean, now vegan, is quick to say he would never use real fur today. "In stressful situations, you would rub it; it was calming and soothing," he says. "It's the same with these beds."

The beds launched in three colors: olive, graphite, and latte. Olive, he says, reflects the "true iridescence" of the olive trees he lives around; graphite is a refined gray; latte is exactly what it sounds like. Pricing is $299 for small, $349 for medium, and $399 for large. Dean says he wanted prices to stay below many luxury dog beds, which climb far higher. "I tried to keep them affordable for people," he says.

Dean also expects the beds to get attention on QVC, even if they are not immediately given dedicated airtime. His dogs, affectionately known to WEN fans as "the angels," are often with him on air. "When I'm on air with the angels, they're going to be in the beds, and people are definitely going to ask," he says.

The beds connect naturally to WEN Pets, which already includes cleansing conditioners and replenishing treatment mists. Dean says pet owners can lightly mist the beds, much as WEN customers mist pillows and bedding. For care, Dean recommends washing gently, drying on cool or delicate, and, when possible, letting them finish in the sun.

WHAT'S NEXT?

As for whether pet products will become a bigger category, Dean is open. "There are other things I buy for pets that are frustrating and drive me crazy," he says. For now, the dog bed is his latest act of problem-solving. The beauty-world perfectionist applied his eye, his instincts, and his love of animals to the place where dogs spend much of their lives.

"I created them because I hit a wall," Dean says. "Why am I settling for this? I want to create all the things that drove me crazy. I need to fix them now. And that's what I've done about the dog bed." It's safe to say we are all waiting with bated breath to see what the natural problem solver sets his sights on next.

OISHII

THE LUXURY STRAWBERRY EXPERIENCE COMES TO CHELSEA MARKET

By Helena Harlow

This August, one of New York City's most talked-about luxury food brands is opening its doors in one of the city's most iconic culinary destinations. Oishii will debut a new pop-up kiosk at Chelsea Market later this month, giving berry lovers the opportunity to experience its celebrated Japanese strawberries in person.

Known for cultivating exceptionally sweet, fragrant strawberries in its state-of-the-art vertical farm, Oishii has earned a devoted following among chefs, food enthusiasts, and discerning consumers. The new kiosk brings the brand's signature experience to Chelsea Market, where visitors can shop Oishii's complete lineup of premium strawberries, including its original Omakase Berry, seasonal varieties, and the new Connoisseur Grade Omakase Berry.

The Connoisseur Pack represents the highest expression of Oishii's craft. Drawn from the top 1% of the harvest, these extraordinary extra-large berries are left on the vine longer to reach peak sweetness and flavor before being hand-selected by Oishii's berry sommelier. Beautifully presented in an elegant set of six or 12, the Connoisseur Pack transforms an everyday fruit into a truly memorable luxury experience.

For those who prefer to enjoy them at home, Connoisseur Grade Omakase Berries are also available through Oishii's premium direct-to-consumer delivery service. Packed at the farm and hand-delivered the very same day, the berries arrive at peak freshness and are best enjoyed within 24 hours, preserving the exceptional quality that makes them so distinctive.

Beyond the Connoisseur Pack, visitors to the Chelsea Market kiosk will be able to discover a curated, rotating selection of Oishii's most coveted offerings—from premium berries and limited-edition sweet treats to bottled beverages, seasonal collaborations, thoughtfully selected Japanese kitchenware, and exclusive gifts, including products available only in person. The full range of Oishii's premium strawberries are each cultivated using a unique combination of advanced technology and natural honeybee pollination. Grown year-round in a carefully controlled environment, the berries have become known for their remarkable sweetness, aroma, and consistently exceptional quality.

The Chelsea Market opening marks another milestone for founder Hiroki Koga, whose vision was inspired by the extraordinary fruit culture of Japan. After moving to the United States, Koga set out to re-create the unforgettable flavor and craftsmanship he remembered from home, building a company that continues to redefine expectations for premium produce.

Whether picking up a tray of Omakase Berries, discovering a seasonal variety, or treating someone to the coveted Connoisseur Pack, visitors to Chelsea Market will have the opportunity to experience the full world of Oishii. It's a destination where craftsmanship, innovation, and extraordinary flavor come together, one remarkable strawberry at a time.

ASK THE BUNION KING

WHAT EVERYONE WANTS TO KNOW ABOUT BUNIONS

By Laura Hearst

Dr. Neal Blitz

For years, people assumed bunion surgery meant large incisions, bulky casts, weeks on crutches, and putting life on hold. Dr. Neal Blitz has spent his career proving otherwise. Known as The Bunion King®, the New York– and Beverly Hills–based foot and ankle surgeon is the creator of the Bunionplasty® 360 Bunion Repair and founder and CEO of Voom medical devices. Through his minimally invasive approach and No Casts No Crutches philosophy, he has helped redefine what patients can expect from modern bunion surgery. Here, he answers some of the questions he hears most often.

Why are so many people still afraid of bunion surgery?
For decades, bunion surgery had a reputation for long recoveries and significant downtime. I believed there had to be a better way. My goal was to create a procedure that corrects the bunion while helping patients get back to their lives sooner and more comfortably.

What actually causes a bunion?
Most bunions are hereditary. Shoes can aggravate the problem, but they usually aren't the cause. Because bunions are progressive, they often worsen over time if left untreated.

Has bunion surgery really changed that much?
Absolutely. Bunionplasty 360 Bunion Repair is a minimally invasive approach that allows many patients to walk the same day in a surgical sandal without casts or crutches. Every patient is different, but today's recovery can be dramatically different from what many people expect.

How does the Bunionplasty procedure differ from traditional bunion surgery?
The Bunionplasty procedure is a minimally invasive approach to bunion correction that differs significantly from many traditional bunion surgeries. Traditional bunion surgery often requires larger incisions and, often, joint fusion to achieve correction. In contrast, the Bunionplasty procedure is performed through a few tiny incisions using a motion-preserving bone cut that realigns the bunion while maintaining the natural function of the joint. This regenerative approach is designed to restore normal anatomy with minimal disruption to the surrounding soft tissues, helping patients return to activity sooner with less scarring and a more natural-looking foot.

Can both feet be corrected at the same time?
In many cases, yes. For appropriate candidates, correcting both feet during one procedure means one recovery instead of two, allowing patients to return to normal activities sooner.

When should someone consider surgery?
It's not about how the bunion looks. It's about how it's affecting your life. If foot pain is preventing you from travel, exercise, work, or simply enjoying the activities you love, it's time to explore your options.

What's the one thing you wish every patient knew?
You don't have to simply live with bunion pain. Modern bunion surgery has evolved tremendously, and the right treatment can help many people stay active, mobile, and doing the things they love without putting life on hold.

Located on Lexington Avenue at 41st Street, SculptHaus NYC offers panoramic views of the New York City skyline, creating an elegant retreat where clients can unwind while receiving personalized care. Every detail of the sophisticated space has been thoughtfully designed to reflect the practice's commitment to luxury, innovation, and whole-body wellness.

Dr. Helmandi brings a unique perspective to the industry. In addition to owning SculptHaus NYC, she is also the owner of Active Physical Therapy & Chiropractic Group, giving her an extensive understanding of the body's anatomy, movement, recovery, and overall function. This foundation allows her to approach body wellness from a comprehensive perspective, combining therapeutic principles with advanced aesthetic technologies to help clients feel healthier, lighter, and more confident.

"Our philosophy is simple—we want to enhance what nature has already given you," says Dr. Helmandi. "Our treatments are designed to support the body's natural processes while defining and enhancing each client's unique shape. Whether through lymphatic drainage, body contouring massage, radio frequency technology, or muscle-toning treatments, our goal is to help clients feel stronger, more sculpted, and more confident without surgery."

As interest in holistic wellness continues to grow, SculptHaus NYC is seeing increasing demand for treatments that reduce bloating, improve circulation, support post-workout and post-travel recovery, and enhance the body's natural contours. Clients are seeking noninvasive alternatives that complement healthy lifestyles while delivering visible, natural-looking results.

"Our clients are looking for more than aesthetics," Dr. Helmandi explains. "They want treatments that help them feel better physically while enhancing their appearance. Lymphatic drainage massage has become one of our signature services because it supports healthy circulation, reduces fluid retention, promotes recovery, and leaves clients feeling lighter and refreshed. With advanced radio frequency technology and body contouring therapies, we're able to help define natural curves, improve skin firmness, and create beautifully sculpted results without downtime."

Among SculptHaus NYC's most sought-after services are customized lymphatic drainage treatments, detoxifying body massages, radio frequency skin tightening, body contouring therapies, muscle activation technology, and wellness-focused recovery sessions. Every treatment plan is personalized to each client's goals, whether they are preparing for a special event, recovering from travel, maintaining fitness results, or simply investing in self-care.

What distinguishes SculptHaus NYC is its individualized approach. Rather than offering one-size-fits-all treatments, every client receives a customized consultation designed around their anatomy, lifestyle, and aesthetic goals. This personalized philosophy, combined with advanced technology and an unwavering commitment to exceptional service, has made SculptHaus NYC a trusted destination for luxury body wellness in New York City.

Looking ahead, Dr. Helmandi remains committed to introducing the latest innovations in noninvasive body contouring and wellness technologies while maintaining the personalized care that defines the SculptHaus experience. As clients increasingly seek treatments that support both beauty and overall well-being, SculptHaus NYC continues to lead with a philosophy centered on confidence, health, and natural enhancement.

With its elegant Manhattan location, holistic approach, and dedication to helping clients define and enhance their natural curves through advanced body sculpting, lymphatic drainage, detoxification therapies, and innovative radio frequency technology, SculptHaus NYC is setting a new standard in luxury wellness—helping every client feel lighter, stronger, sculpted, and confident from the inside out.

FOUNDER ALANA EITMAN ON A SMARTER APPROACH TO TICK CONTROL

By Winter Fairchild

As tick-borne illnesses continue to rise across the East End, Hamptons homeowners are looking for smarter ways to protect their families without compromising the beauty of their landscapes. EcoTick offers a targeted approach that addresses ticks at the source while minimizing impact on the surrounding environment. Founder Alana Eitman shares how the company is rethinking tick prevention through science, sustainability, and long-term protection.

Most homeowners think tick control means spraying chemicals. How is EcoTick different?
EcoTick uses discreet tick boxes to target mice and chipmunks, where ticks begin their life cycle. By stopping ticks at the source before they spread throughout a property, we take a smarter, more targeted approach to tick control. I started EcoTick after seeing friends and family struggle with Lyme disease and Alpha-gal syndrome and believing there had to be a better solution.

How do you reduce ticks while protecting the Hamptons' landscape and wildlife?
Protecting the environment is central to our approach. Hamptons homeowners value their landscapes, pollinators, and wildlife, so our system is designed to reduce ticks in a targeted way while allowing families to enjoy their outdoor spaces and helping preserve the surrounding ecosystem.

What do people misunderstand most about ticks and Lyme disease?
Many people believe ticks jump from trees or that deer are the main cause of tick infestations. In reality, ticks can't jump or fly. They wait in grass and low vegetation until people or pets brush past. While deer carry adult ticks, ticks begin their life cycle on small mammals like mice and chipmunks. Many people are also surprised to learn that Lyme disease doesn't always cause a bull's-eye rash.

What does effective long-term tick prevention look like?
Successful tick control starts with prevention before ticks become established. That means targeting the small mammals ticks rely on during their life cycle rather than simply reacting after a problem develops. Our goal isn't to eliminate mice and chipmunks but to reduce the ticks they carry. The most effective protection comes from consistent, long-term prevention rather than temporary treatments.

Have homeowners become more interested in safer, environmentally conscious solutions?
Absolutely. Today's homeowners want effective protection, but they also want to know exactly how it works. EcoTick applies a very small amount of treatment directly to the mice and chipmunks ticks depend on instead of dispersing products across the landscape. The result is a highly targeted approach that stays out of the water system while helping protect families, pets, and the environment.

MARCELLA HYMOWITZ'S THE PEARL

By Jeremy Murphy

Marcella Hymowitz

For Marcella Hymowitz, opening The Pearl on Manhattan's Upper East Side was more than creating another dance studio. It was about bringing together decades of experience as a New York Knicks City Dancer, fitness instructor, entrepreneur, choreographer, and mother to create something she felt was missing from city life.

The result is a studio that blends dance, fitness, cheerleading, and community for every stage of life. Since opening The Pearl, Hymowitz has envisioned a gathering place where connections continue after the music stops.

TURNING DREAMS INTO REALITY

"The Pearl was really the brainchild of a lifelong dream to own a dance studio," Hymowitz says. Over time, she imagined a space where people from all walks could come together, instead of a traditional dance school.

"As I got older, that vision evolved from simply being a dance studio for children and teens into a space that serves adults as well," she explains. "Kids can be taking classes in one room while adults are in another."

That flexibility is central to The Pearl's philosophy. Children and teens can attend dance, cheer, hip-hop, or acro classes, while parents participate in sculpt, cardio, or dance-based fitness. Families aren't forced into rigid semester schedules either, as many programs are offered on a drop-in basis.

MORE THAN A STUDIO

The Pearl is truly distinguished by what happens outside the classroom. "We host events before and after classes. One day there might be a speaker, another day a brand activation, and there can be different activities happening throughout the studio," Hymowitz says.

The thoughtfully designed Upper East Side space includes areas where children and teens can complete homework before class, a kitchen where families can eat together, comfortable areas for adults to work remotely, and even a soundproof room for private phone calls. The studio also prioritizes working women, offering classes at 6:00 and 7:00 in the morning and evening with specialty pricing of $30 for women under 30.

"After Covid, I felt there were many women who wanted a third space that wasn't work and wasn't home. A place where they could relax, stay in their sweatpants, order a green juice or coffee, and simply have some time for themselves," she says.

DANCE, CHEER, AND TEAMWORK

Long before opening The Pearl, Hymowitz spent years performing as a New York Knicks City Dancer, building a career that included choreography, artistic direction, and fitness instruction.

Yet one of her greatest passions has always been cheerleading. "We have a cheer team and offer cheer classes for younger girls," she says. "I was a cheerleader in high school. My senior year, I was captain of the team, and we won nationals. Cheer was a huge part of my life."

While dance nurtured her creativity, cheerleading taught her something different. "Cheer requires everyone working together. If one person is off, it can affect the entire routine. There's nothing better than that feeling of teamwork and accomplishment."

Recognizing that Manhattan lacked organized cheer opportunities, Hymowitz helped develop one of the city's first programs before bringing it into The Pearl. "I originally started a cheer program with Fastbreak Sports, developed their cheerleading program, and eventually branched out on my own," she says.

The Pearl NYC

A BUSINESSWOMAN FROM THE BEGINNING

Her entrepreneurial spirit started early. Hymowitz began teaching group fitness while still a teenager after an ankle injury introduced her to another side of exercise. Working summers at a hometown gym, she found herself leading workouts before she was even old enough to vote.

While studying exercise science in college, she completed a class project that would unexpectedly foreshadow her future. "One of my projects was transforming my hometown gym into a women's-only fitness center," she recalls. "It was very similar to what I based The Pearl off of."

That vision eventually became reality. Today, the studio's calming palette of pink and cream surprises even visitors who insist they dislike pink.

"Girls who have sworn off the color pink walk into the studio and they say, 'Oh, this is what we like.' Every time."

EXPANDING BEYOND MANHATTAN

Although The Pearl is rooted in the Upper East Side, its reach extends beyond Manhattan. This August, The Pearl is making its Hamptons debut, with pop-up classes every Tuesday and Thursday at WAVE in Southampton, followed by two special events at Post House in Sag Harbor on August 16 and 29, featuring guest instructors. Summer residents and visitors will have the opportunity to experience the studio's signature combination of dance, fitness, and community.

For Hymowitz, growth has never been measured by additional locations or larger classes. Success is seeing friendships form, families come together, and women discover a place where wellness is more than exercise.

"The entrepreneurial side has always interested me, and creating The Pearl allowed me to bring together my passion for fitness, dance, community, and business," she says.

At The Pearl, a lifelong dream has manifested into a community, one class, one conversation, and one connection at a time.

IMAGINE SWIMMING

AQUATIC FITNESS FOR ALL AGES IN MONTAUK

By Winter Fairchild

Montauk has another place making waves this summer—and it's not a beach club or a restaurant: It's Imagine Swimming. Known as New York's premier learn-to-swim school, its arrival signals a new era for the Montauk Playhouse—home to Imagine Swimming's state-of-the-art Sarah and Maurice Iudicone Aquatic Center.

The aquatic center features a four-lane, 25-yard lap pool, as well as a warm-water teaching and leisure pool designed for children, families, and seniors alike. The aquatic center's amenities also include men's and women's locker rooms, a family changing room, pool deck showers, restrooms, and expansive off-deck viewing windows. More than just a swim school, Imagine Swimming creates a welcoming environment for people of all ages, encouraging active lifestyles and building community through its programming with classes such as competitive coaching and aqua fitness as well as youth swim lessons.

As a first-of-its-kind offering in Montauk, the center offers a comprehensive slate of signature programming designed for swimmers of all ages and levels. Weekly lessons, offered Wednesday through Sunday, combine small group ratios with high-energy, child-centered instruction in 30-to-60-minute sessions. Imagine Swimming also offers Lap Swim memberships, available Monday to Sunday, for swimmers who want flexible access throughout the week. Additionally, its aqua fitness classes provide 45-minute, low-impact, high-benefit workouts that add movement and strength training for any routine.

Imagine Swimming also has a new Masters program (included with the Lap Swim membership) offered on Tuesdays and Thursdays that welcomes swimmers of all levels, combining technique-focused stroke development and aerobic training with ocean-inspired fitness to build efficiency, flexibility, endurance, and paddling strength for life in Montauk. These workouts will be primarily led by Lars Merseburg—an Imagine co-founder, former German national team member, and NCAA national champion—alongside Metro Masters coach Angelika Cruz.

Imagine Swimming's arrival represents more than the opening of a new facility. It creates a space for residents of all ages and experience levels to add movement to their summer routines and build a new kind of community in the process. Through its programming, Imagine Swimming offers a welcoming third space where residents and visitors can connect, stay active, and develop a lifelong relationship with the water.

"We think of swimming pools as a welcoming hub for the entire community, a place where all are welcome," said Casey Barrett, co-founder of Imagine Swimming. "And it's a truism that one always feels better getting out of a pool than when you got in!"

Imagine Swimming is a meaningful addition to Montauk, with a teaching philosophy rooted in building trust, comfort, and confidence in the water before advancing technique and performance. This approach has carried Imagine Swimming to elite status among New York City swim schools and has guided its opening in Montauk. With programming designed for every age and experience level, Imagine Swimming is helping create a healthier, more connected community, with a committment to aquatic fitness for all.

THE SHINE STUDIO

By Alie Mitchell

Shine has been a thriving mobile creative arts business in New York City since 2005, building a reputation for imaginative, child-centered programming that blends process art, social skills, and experiential learning. But it was in 2012 that founder Aaron Goldschmidt recognized an opportunity beyond the city—one that would shape the next chapter of Shine's story.

Many of Shine's New York City families spent their summers in the Hamptons, yet at the time, options for children's programming were limited to just a handful of large, traditional camps. Goldschmidt saw a clear gap: Families were craving something smaller, more intimate, and deeply rooted in creativity. With a vision to create a program that celebrated the natural beauty, rich history, and close-knit community of the East End, Shine in the Hamptons was born.

Launching its first summer camp in 2014, Shine quickly resonated with families seeking a more thoughtful and engaging alternative. What began as a small, creative offering has since grown into a beloved seasonal staple. Now in its 13th summer, Shine has enjoyed continued success, a testament to both the strength of its programming and the loyal community it has cultivated over the years.

A major milestone came in 2021 with the opening of The Shine Studio, a dedicated creative arts space in the Hamptons. This expansion marked a shift from a seasonal program to a year-round presence, allowing Shine to deepen its connection with both local residents and visiting families. The studio has become a vibrant hub for creativity, offering classes, workshops, and events designed for all ages, 18 months to adult.

At the heart of Shine is the belief that the most meaningful learning happens when children are free to explore, create, and connect. Rather than dividing experiences, Shine brings together art, music, movement, cooking, nature, and imaginative play to create immersive, multi-sensory adventures. Each thoughtfully designed experience nurtures curiosity, encourages creative thinking, and supports the social, emotional, and cognitive development of the whole child—proving that the most lasting lessons are often discovered through joyful exploration.

As Shine celebrates 13 years in the Hamptons, the occasion will be marked with an Art Mitzvah on Sunday, August 16, bringing together families, friends, and the community for an afternoon of creativity, live music, food, crafts, and celebration. For more information and tickets, visit shinenyc.net.

JESSICA ALESSI

THE BEACH HOUSE SALON

By Winter Fairchild

Known for creating effortless, sun-kissed color, The Beach House Salon has become one of the Hamptons' go-to destinations for beautiful, natural hair. We caught up with its founder, Jessica Alessi, to talk balayage, summer trends, and healthy hair.

What inspired you to open The Beach House Salon?
I've always loved creating beautiful natural hair, but I wanted to build a space that felt different. Relaxed, creative, and effortlessly luxurious, but where clients could truly feel at home.

What is your favorite hair transformation to create?
Lived-in blondes and dimensional brunettes. I love creating color that looks natural, grows out beautifully, and makes people feel like the best version of themselves.

What are the biggest hair trends you're seeing this summer in the Hamptons?
Healthy, expensive-looking hair is everything right now. Soft dimension, effortless color, and polished styles that still feel natural.

What's your number-one tip for keeping hair healthy and beautiful?
Invest in your hair like you do your skin. Use professional products, protect it from heat and the sun, and don't wait until it's damaged to take care of it.

Adam Levine

Adam Levine

Maroon 5 lead singer Adam Levine, who was a coach on The Voice, is being scrutinized on the internet by people who claim plastic surgery has made him "unrecognizable." The critics say Levine looks "embalmed" due to overzealous plastic surgery that's made the handsome singer resemble a Madame Tussauds wax figure. Rumors are flying about male celebrities altering their looks, including Brad Pitt, who gets a thumbs-up, and others, who some say have crossed a line and are getting a thumbs-down, like Bradley Cooper, Ricky Martin, and Levine. Plastic surgeons on both coasts have noticed a surge in male patients coming in for procedures, including liposuction. Dr. Paige Benyamein, based in Irvine, California, said, "We are seeing more males seeking tummy tucks, face lifts, upper eyelid lifts, and brow lifts. MYKONOS

THE WILDEST PLACE ON EARTH

By R. Couri Hay

A LOVE STORY: JACKIE KENNEDY ONASSIS

I arrived on Mykonos with my Couri family and friends, and we were driven to our 10-bedroom villa, where our chef and staff of six were waiting with a superb dinner of local fare. mlv.villas

Known for its decadent nightlife, nude beaches, and swanky beach clubs like Nammos and Principote, Mykonos has plenty to offer for every taste: fabulous family-friendly beaches, water sports, cultural experiences, great shopping from tourist trinkets to Chanel, charming towns to explore, and the famous windmills that are the island's most-photographed site. Mykonos is also a longtime magnet for the jet set and their mega-yachts. Over the decades, chic guests have included Princess Grace, Elizabeth Taylor, Brigitte Bardot, Marlon Brando, Princess Soraya, the wife of the shah of Iran, and Jackie O, after whom a beach club is named where you can see a fun drag show during lunch. During our stay, we even had dinner at Nõema next to Jeff Bezos and Lauren Sánchez Bezos; we all had the hot spot's signature lobster and pasta dish. Bezos and his wife were staying on their $500 million superyacht, named Koru. Also anchored offshore was the Maltese Falcon, the world's most glamorous sailing yacht. I highly recommend cruising on this elegant boat. I have been lucky enough to sail on it twice, once to Tahiti and again to the British Virgin Islands. It's the only way, really.

Backgrid

Chora

KING PAVLOS OF GREECE, MICK JAGGER, ARIANA GRANDE AND LEONARDO DICAPRIO

Once a sleepy fishing port, Mykonos first took the fancy of high society in the early 1950s as a stop on the honeymoon cruise of Greek royals King Pavlos and Frederica of Hanover. The royal couple and their guests were so enamored by the island's beauty, they returned for a second visit, and its popularity skyrocketed among wealthy Greeks like Stavros Niarchos, Aristotle Onassis, and Maria Callas.

It remains a favorite of the wealthy today. Mykonos is among the world's top destinations for private jets, and famous folks still flock there in droves. In recent years, Mick Jagger, Leonardo DiCaprio, Sharon Stone, Alessandra Ambrosio, Demi Moore, Gerard Butler, Linda Evangelista, Matt Damon, George Clooney, Gigi Hadid, Mariah Carey, and Ariana Grande have all enjoyed this jewel of the Aegean.

SUMPTUOUS DINING

Even though we had an excellent chef at our villa, we chose to sample some of Mykonos's finest dining spots during our stay. Bonus: Many restaurants have spectacular ocean views, so dinner or drinks during sunset is sublime. Our crew was 10 strong, from teenagers to their parents, so we checked out a diverse range of dining options. We took in swoony sunsets over dinner at Scorpios Beach Club restaurant, Buddha Bar at the Santa Marina Hotel, and Kastros in Little Venice. We dined at Zuma, Kinjo, Apaggio Seaside Restaurant, Rizes Folklore Farmstead, Nice n Easy, BeefBar, and Katrin. We tore ourselves away from the poolside, with its spectacular view of the sea and sunset, for lunch at Nammos Beach Restaurant and Alemagou Beach Restaurant. All terrific. First on my agenda when back in New York City: SoulCycle!

WHAT TO SEE AND DO IN MYKONOS

THE CAPITAL CITY: CHORA, LITTLE VENICE

Exploring the charming, twisting streets of Chora, Mykonos's beautiful, whitewashed capital, is a delight. Legend has it that the seemingly impenetrable mazelike street layout was designed to deter invading pirates from finding their way into the center of the city or getting back out. Today, in the pirate-free era, this confusing but fun setup makes for delightful wandering through charming alleys and squares.

The neighborhood of Little Venice is one of the most stunning places on the island, studded with gorgeous historic homes built by prosperous ship captains of long ago. Many of them are now restaurants, bars, shops, and nightclubs with spectacular sea views, perfect for taking in the sunsets. The area is buzzing day and night, so it's attractive for families and night owls alike.

THE WINDMILLS OF KATO MILI

While in Little Venice, don't miss the famous windmills dating back to the 16th century. The windmills were originally used to provide wind power for grinding grain. Yep, back before electricity, green energy was all the rage. The hilltop views overlooking Little Venice, all of Chora, and its harbor are glorious. Grab a seat in the small square across from the windmills, open a bottle of wine, and be mesmerized by the orange and pink skies as dusk settles in.

Soak up a bit of history at the Aegean Maritime Museum, which is nearby. The historic area of Alefkandra is also close to the windmills, lovely for a stroll with plenty of cute restaurants and bars for a bite or a tipple with seaside views. In the evenings, revelers flock here for music and partying. aegean-maritime-museum.com

ANO MERA

Ano Mera is the second biggest city on Mykonos, and as the island's only inland town, it has a quieter atmosphere, a change from the beaches and nightlife in Chora. It's also a quick ride away, only 5 miles from Chora. Mykonos is a small island. In Ano Mera's narrow cobbled streets, you'll find some fascinating sites like the ruins of Gyzi, a 13th-century Venetian-style castle, and a couple of beautiful ancient monasteries, Panagia Tourliani and Paleokastro.

In the summer, Ano Mera is home to unique fairs known as panigyri, featuring wonderful food and wine, and typically lasting until dawn. Highlights include the annual panigyri of Saint Marina on July 17 and a weeklong celebration of the Virgin Mary each August with a bazaar in the village square.

DELOS: HOME OF THE GREEK GODS

Believed to be the birthplace of the twin gods Apollo and Artemis, Delos is a small, rocky island about 30 minutes by boat from Chora's port. You'll be transported back thousands of years to a partially intact ancient Greek society, with temples, houses, and marketplaces adorned with statues and sculptures that pay tribute to its deities.

Nammos Beach Club

A UNESCO World Heritage Site, Delos was once the religious and political center of the Cyclades. Because of its mythological significance as the birthplace of gods, the ancient Ionians made Delos their religious capital. It fell victim to rampant piracy, and after a Roman attack in 88 B.C., Delos was abandoned. Its rich history was discovered during an archeological excavation in the late 19th century.

Today, you can wander about the ancient ruins of once-monumental structures like the Propylaea, a grand marble archway, and the Sanctuary of Apollo. Many artifacts can be seen at the Archaeological Museum of Delos.

RHENIA ISLAND

Rhenia Island, located southwest of Mykonos past Delos, is quiet and uninhabited, steeped in wild nature and Greek mythology. Around 530 B.C., the tyrant Polycrates conquered Rhenia and dedicated it to Apollo, the Olympian god of oracles, prophecy, archery, poetry, music, and healing. Rhenia is an easy hop from Delos, so people often visit both on the same day. You can also swim and snorkel in crystal blue waters off Rhenia.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL MUSEUM OF MYKONOS

Located at the Chora harbor overlooking Delos, the circa-1902 Archaeological Museum of Mykonos houses artifacts discovered during the excavation of a "purification pit," a repository for urns of cremated remains, on Rhenia Island. Relics on display include vases, jewelry, and pottery dating as far back as the 25th century B.C., as well as artifacts relating to the history of Delos's ancient shrines. Notable for history buffs, the museum has a large piece of pottery with scenes from the fall of Troy.

MYKONOS BEACH CLUBS

Then there's the famous Mykonos party atmosphere. The island, known as the Ibiza of Greece, is a hotbed of partying both day and night, with a variety of clubs, bars, and beach clubs catering to all tastes. It's also a longtime mecca for LGBTQ+ tourists, with many venues serving that community. It's a hopping gay scene that draws attractive revelers from around the world. Here I've rounded up some of the island's best beach clubs.

NAMMOS

We reserved sun beds at Nammos to while away one splendid afternoon during our time on Mykonos. This spot on Psarou Beach is perhaps the best-known of the island's beach clubs and a see-and-be-seen favorite of the jet set. Launched in 2003, Nammos is so popular that it's now a high-class brand with locations in Cannes, Dubai, and Limassol in Cyprus. Reservations in advance are a must, but one way to snag a last-minute sun lounger is to stay at the brand-new Nammos Hotel; each booking includes two impossible-to-get sun beds. nammos.com

Prince Rainier, Princess Grace, with Albert and Caroline in Athens, 1961

The Parthenon

SCORPIOS

On the secluded Paraga peninsula, Scorpios offers a holistic space with a beach club in the image of a Greek agora. There's an inspired menu of Greek classics and freshly caught seafood, and a bazaar stocked with handmade Greek kaftans and cool sunglasses. Daytime is chill and relaxed, and sunset brings mellow music. The vibe here is boho chic. scorpios.com

JACKIEO' BEACH CLUB

Named after Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, whose early-1960s visits to Mykonos were pivotal in the island's rise to fame, JackieO' is chic, welcoming, and lots of fun. Set on Super Paradise Beach, the club also has a restaurant, swimming pool, and Jacuzzi, and features regular drag shows in the summer. Like its namesake, the vibe at JackieO' is effortlessly stylish and unfussy. Come as you are—no jewelry, hair, or makeup is required. jackieomykonos.com

BEEFBAR ON THE COAST

Evoking a mid-century jet-set cool, sun worshippers at The Coast can order lunch from Beefbar directly to their lounger. Set on the gorgeous bay of Agios Ioannis, the place is accessible by boat with stylish habitués alighting on the private jetty or mooring their yachts in front. Others stay at the elegant hotel at the site. beefbar.com

ATHENS

On your way to or from Mykonos, I highly recommend spending a few days in Athens. This modern city with ancient roots is a treasure, its historic landmarks like the Parthenon and the Acropolis sit amid vibrant neighborhoods full of quirky shops, bars, museums, and cafés. Noshing is a must; excellent food is found everywhere in Athens. Here's a guide to some of my favorite sites in this amazing city.

THE ACROPOLIS AND THE PARTHENON

The Acropolis, the most famous landmark in Athens, is a large, fortified hill in the center, upon which lie several ancient structures that have overlooked the city for 2,500 years. The Parthenon, located on top of the Acropolis hill, is one of the most prominent buildings in Athens. Built between 447 and 438 B.C. as a temple to Athena, the patron goddess of the city, the Parthenon is probably the world's most iconic Greek ruin.

We toured the Acropolis and the Parthenon, which has been restored quite a bit since we were last there. Restorations of this ancient site have been ongoing since 1975, so no matter how many times you visit Athens, there's always something new to see at the Acropolis. theacropolismuseum.gr

THE ERECHTHEION

There are other interesting sites on the Acropolis too, including the Erechtheion, where the porch is supported by six columns in the shape of draped women. The Theatre of Dionysus is impressive, and the Acropolis Museum displays many artifacts from this ancient site.

We rode back down in the elevator—yes, if you get the right guide, you can not only go to the front of the line with your group, but you can also use the elevator that was put in with funding from the Onassis Foundation. This modern innovation improves accessibility at the site.

Check out Anafiótika, a charming area on the slopes of the Acropolis known for a small cluster of white, island-style homes reminiscent of Santorini. Wander the streets, poke around the shops, and stop for a drink or a meal at a taverna.

THE HOTEL GRANDE BRETAGNE

After our walk, we headed to the Plaka, which is opposite the Hotel Grande Bretagne, still the best hotel in town. We strolled in the shade and picked one of many local and authentic Greek restaurants to order divine grilled octopus. After lunch, grab a gelato and then shop and shop and shop. The prices are good, and there is a lot to choose from.

SYNTAGMA SQUARE, THE NATIONAL ARCHAEOLOGICAL MUSEUM

We stopped at the Panathenaic Stadium, where the Olympics were first held over 2,000 years ago. We took a stroll near the ocean and watched the changing of the guard, which takes place hourly in front of the Presidential Palace. The guards with black pom-poms on their shoes, tights, beige skirts, red hats, and long braids do a truly hilarious march that reminded me of show horses lifting their legs and pawing the ground.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Syntagma Square is a moving memorial dedicated to the Greek soldiers lost during World War I. Nearby is the excellent National Archaeological Museum, which features the best collection of ancient Greek artifacts in the world. History buffs could spend hours here. namuseum.gr

The Exarcheia neighborhood was once the home to anarchists, revolutionaries, and artists. A bit of the grit remains, but today it is packed with interesting restaurants, drinking establishments, and bookstores perfect for an afternoon or evening exploration.

KOLONAKI, MOUNT LYCABETTUS, AND THE MUSEUM QUARTER

Kolonaki is Athens's swankiest central neighborhood, and a shopper's paradise. Even if you're not in the market for designer goods, this area is worth a visit, as it is home to Athens's Museum Quarter, Mount Lycabettus, and the National Gardens.

Mount Lycabettus is the highest summit in central Athens, offering some of the best views of the city. Huffing and puffing are not required to reach the top; you can take a funicular up the hill. lycabettus.com

This area's museums and galleries include the Benaki Museum of Culture and the Goulandris Museum of Cycladic Art, which both have impressive collections of Greek art and artifacts from prehistoric times to the modern era. benaki.org, cycladic.gr

The Byzantine Museum is one of the best in Athens, with an enormous collection of over 25,000 items from the 3rd century through to medieval times. The National Gallery has a wide selection of art, and the National Gardens' extensive grounds are not to be missed. byzantinemuseum.gr

The Porch of Maidens

ROCK HOUSE, TURKS AND CAICOS

WHERE TIMELESS ROMANCE MEETS CARIBBEAN LUXURY

By Robyn Freedman

There are destinations that impress, and then there are destinations that become part of your story. Perched dramatically atop the ancient limestone cliffs of Providenciales's breathtaking North Shore, Rock House by Grace Bay Resorts is redefining luxury in the Turks and Caicos Islands. Inspired by the elegance of the Mediterranean coastline yet unmistakably Caribbean in spirit, this extraordinary retreat offers an intimate escape where spectacular ocean panoramas, impeccable service, and refined design come together in perfect harmony.

Occupying a magnificent 14-acre oceanfront estate with over 600 feet of pristine shoreline and elevations reaching nearly 95 feet above sea level, Rock House embraces an ecological approach to luxury, preserving the natural beauty of its dramatic landscape while creating one of the Caribbean's most exclusive hideaways. Every arrival feels like discovering a secret destination known only to the world's most discerning travelers.

For couples seeking an unforgettable romantic escape, families celebrating life's milestones, or executives searching for a sophisticated retreat, Rock House offers an experience unlike any other. Holiday reservations for 2026 and 2027 are now among the most coveted in the Caribbean.

The crown jewel of the resort is the magnificent Ocean View 10 Bedroom Reserve Villa, created by seamlessly combining two adjacent Five Bedroom Reserve Villas into an extraordinary private estate. Designed for multigenerational families, destination weddings, milestone celebrations, executive retreats, and exclusive gatherings, the residence delivers the privacy of a luxury home with the impeccable services of a world-class resort.

Spread across two expansive levels, the villa features ten beautifully appointed bedroom suites, each offering a California king bed, spa-inspired ensuite bath, freestanding soaking tub, and separate walk-in shower. Two gourmet kitchens, elegant indoor and outdoor living spaces, expansive terraces, and two private infinity pools create an effortless atmosphere for entertaining or simply enjoying uninterrupted moments together while overlooking the turquoise waters of the Atlantic Ocean.

The panoramic 180-degree views of Providenciales's North Shore are simply mesmerizing. Morning coffee arrives with the gentle sound of waves below. Afternoons unfold beside the expansive cliffside pools, perched nearly 25 feet above the sea, while evenings become unforgettable as the Caribbean sky transforms into brilliant shades of gold, coral, and sapphire.

Rock House was designed for unforgettable moments, and perhaps nowhere is this more evident than as a destination wedding venue. Imagine exchanging vows on the resort's spectacular oceanfront pier with endless blue water stretching toward the horizon. Family and friends remain only steps away within private villas and elegant suites, allowing an entire celebration to unfold effortlessly in one extraordinary location.

Sunset receptions beneath the stars, intimate beachside dinners, and celebrations extending throughout the property create memories destined to last a lifetime.

Before dinner, guests naturally gather at the resort's enchanting Cave Bar, carved into the dramatic limestone cliffs. It has quickly become one of the property's signature experiences, offering handcrafted cocktails in one of the Caribbean's most distinctive settings. As happy hour unfolds against the backdrop of the setting sun, it becomes clear why Rock House is already earning recognition among the region's most remarkable luxury resorts.

Dining reaches extraordinary heights at Vita Restaurant, where contemporary Italian cuisine is elevated by fresh Caribbean influences and one of the most breathtaking dining settings anywhere in the islands. Suspended more than 30 feet above the ocean, Vita offers an atmosphere as unforgettable as its cuisine. Signature dishes include yellowfin tuna tartare, buffalo burrata, lemon spaghetti with wild jumbo prawns, locally caught red snapper, grilled lamb cutlets, and beautifully prepared branzino for two. Decadent desserts, exceptional wines, and imaginative cocktails crafted by the resort's master mixologists complete an evening that rivals the world's finest culinary destinations.

Guests seeking additional culinary adventures will discover that the celebrated Grace Bay Resorts Collection offers several exceptional dining experiences beyond Rock House itself. Among the most sought-after is Infinity Restaurant & Raw Bar, widely regarded as one of Turks and Caicos' premier destinations for premium steaks, exceptional sushi, fresh seafood, and elegant waterfront dining. A dinner at Infinity has become a true island tradition and is considered a must during any luxury stay in Providenciales.

Beyond its accommodations, Rock House embraces a lifestyle centered on wellness, relaxation, and authentic island discovery. Guests may enjoy private poolside or beachside dining, in-room service, luxurious spa treatments, private cabanas overlooking the sea, a state-of-the-art fitness center, personal training sessions, yoga, Pilates, tennis and pickleball clinics, HIIT workouts, and restorative ice bath experiences.

Nature lovers can explore the beautifully preserved Rock House Nature Trail, winding through native tropical vegetation while revealing the fascinating geological and historical story of the island's ancient limestone landscape.

The resort also features the elegant COCO Boutique, a carefully curated luxury shopping destination showcasing international resort wear, designer swimwear, fine accessories, and sophisticated fashion collections. Every piece from some of the world's most coveted luxury brands, creating a shopping experience that perfectly complements the refined atmosphere of the resort.

Accommodations range from beautifully appointed Oceanfront Studios and Ridge Studios to spacious one- and two-bedroom suites, culminating in the Reserve Villa Collection featuring private residences with two through ten bedrooms. For corporate retreats and incentive groups, additional luxury accommodations throughout the Grace Bay Resorts portfolio can comfortably host meetings, executive conferences, and celebrations of virtually any size while maintaining the highest standards of personalized service.

Rock House is more than a luxury resort—it is an invitation to experience one of the Caribbean's newest and most captivating destinations. Romantic yet sophisticated, intimate yet grand, every detail has been thoughtfully crafted from arrival until departure. Whether celebrating a honeymoon, planning an unforgettable destination wedding, gathering generations of family together, or simply escaping to paradise, Rock House offers an experience that lingers long after the journey home.

For reservations, holiday availability, weddings, corporate retreats, or private villa inquiries, contact Rock House, Grace Bay Resorts, 1 Blue Mountain Road, Providenciales, Turks and Caicos Islands, or visit gracebayresorts.com.

Holiday 2026 and 2027 reservations are now booking for what promises to become one of the Caribbean's most extraordinary luxury destinations.

SALTERRA RESORT & SPA, SOUTH CAICOS

DISCOVER THE CARIBBEAN'S NEWEST ICON OF LUXURY, PRIVACY, AND PARADISE

By Robyn Freedman

There are places in the world reserved for those who seek something beyond extraordinary. Places where privacy is priceless, beauty is untouched, and luxury is not simply experienced—it is discovered. Salterra Resort & Spa, South Caicos is one of those rare destinations—a secluded Caribbean sanctuary where every detail has been thoughtfully designed for those who appreciate the exceptional.

Your arrival begins in Providenciales, where, after clearing customs, a scenic island flight carries you above the mesmerizing turquoise waters of the Turks and Caicos archipelago before touching down in South Caicos. From the air, the vibrant blues of the Caribbean seem almost unreal, offering the first glimpse of an island that remains wonderfully untouched.

Known affectionately as The Big South, South Caicos is one of the Caribbean's best-kept secrets. Measuring just 8.5 square miles, it offers something increasingly difficult to find: genuine tranquility. Here, there are no bustling crowds or overdeveloped beaches. Instead, visitors discover a peaceful island rich in history, authentic local culture, and breathtaking natural beauty.

Every sunrise paints the horizon in brilliant color, while evenings deliver spectacular sunsets before revealing some of the clearest star-filled skies in the Caribbean. Even passing tropical showers become part of the experience, often giving way to vivid rainbows stretching across the island.

South Caicos is proudly known as the fishing and seafood capital of the Turks and Caicos Islands, where generations of island families have built their lives around the sea. Their warmth, hospitality, and deep connection to the island create an atmosphere that feels personal, welcoming, and refreshingly authentic.

Perfectly positioned along this remarkable coastline, Salterra Resort & Spa blends refined luxury with effortless Caribbean elegance. Spacious oceanfront guest rooms and suites feature sophisticated island-inspired décor, luxurious bedding, spa-style bathrooms, expansive living spaces, and floor-to-ceiling views that seamlessly bring the outdoors inside. Every accommodation has been thoughtfully designed to embrace the island's natural beauty while providing the elevated comforts expected from a world-class luxury resort.

For guests seeking an even more exclusive experience, the spectacular Premier Penthouse offers expansive entertaining areas, multiple bedrooms, panoramic ocean views, and exceptional privacy. It is an extraordinary setting for multigenerational family vacations, executive retreats, wedding celebrations, or simply indulging in one of the Caribbean's most luxurious accommodations.

Dining is one of Salterra's defining experiences. At Brine, locally sourced seafood and island ingredients are transformed into elegant culinary creations that celebrate both Caribbean flavors and international refinement. With its intimate atmosphere and exceptional cuisine, reservations are highly recommended. Guests looking for relaxed oceanfront dining will find Cobo Bar & Grill equally inviting, serving fresh seafood alongside Caribbean, American, and Mexican-inspired favorites. Throughout the resort, additional venues including The Flamingo Café, Regatta, and Jack & Jenny's provide everything from handcrafted coffees and light bites to lively evening gatherings, ensuring every meal becomes part of the vacation experience.

Wellness is equally elevated at The Spa at Salterra. Inspired by South Caicos's rich salt heritage and natural surroundings, the spa offers an exceptional collection of restorative massages, holistic therapies, beauty treatments, and wellness rituals designed to leave guests feeling completely renewed. It is a peaceful sanctuary where time slows, stress disappears, and every treatment reflects the serenity of the island itself.

Adventure awaits just beyond the shoreline. South Caicos is surrounded by some of the Caribbean's most pristine marine environments, making it a paradise for exploration. Guests can dive vibrant coral reefs with Salterra's professional scuba program, whether earning certification or joining guided dives among tropical fish, sea turtles, eagle rays, and spectacular underwater landscapes. Snorkeling excursions reveal equally unforgettable encounters with marine life, while paddleboarding and kayaking offer peaceful ways to experience the island's crystal-clear waters.

Private boat charters and sunset cruises introduce hidden coves, secluded beaches, and untouched cays that feel entirely your own. Guests can spend the day exploring deserted private islands, enjoying gourmet picnics on powder-soft sand, or discovering the extraordinary beauty that exists beyond the resort's shoreline. Bonefishing, deep-sea fishing, eco-tours, and wildlife excursions further showcase why South Caicos has become one of the Caribbean's most remarkable destinations for nature lovers and outdoor enthusiasts.

Families will discover that Salterra offers the perfect balance of sophistication and memorable experiences for every generation. The thoughtfully curated Kids Club provides younger guests with engaging activities inspired by the island's culture, marine life, and natural surroundings, allowing children to learn, create, and explore while parents relax by the pool, unwind at the spa, or enjoy a leisurely afternoon together. It is a destination where family memories are made effortlessly.

Salterra also provides the perfect setting for life's most meaningful celebrations. From intimate beachfront weddings and anniversaries to milestone birthdays, family gatherings, and executive retreats, every occasion is thoughtfully curated by the resort's experienced events team, creating unforgettable moments in an atmosphere of effortless elegance.

Behind Salterra lies a remarkable legacy. Developed by a third-generation Caribbean family with more than four decades of hospitality experience throughout the region, the resort was envisioned not simply as a luxury destination, but as a long-term commitment to South Caicos itself. Every decision reflects a dedication to protecting the island's environment, preserving its cultural heritage, investing in its local community, and creating opportunities for future generations.

The resort's distinctive architecture and interiors were created in collaboration with the internationally acclaimed EOA Group, whose elemental design philosophy draws inspiration from stone, sand, sea, and sky. The result is an atmosphere that feels effortlessly elegant, timeless, and deeply connected to its surroundings—luxury that never competes with nature, but complements it.

Salterra Resort & Spa is more than a Caribbean getaway. It is a destination where refined hospitality, exceptional dining, restorative wellness, extraordinary adventures, and authentic island culture come together in perfect harmony. It is a place where mornings begin with endless turquoise horizons, afternoons are filled with unforgettable discoveries, and evenings end beneath brilliant Caribbean skies.

For discerning travelers planning their next luxury escape, South Caicos offers something increasingly priceless—space, privacy, authenticity, and the freedom to truly disconnect while enjoying every modern comfort.

A SOFTER SIDE OF FORT LAUDERDALE

PELICAN GRAND BEACH RESORT AND ITS ROOFTOP GEM, PURE SPA

By Inna DeSilva

Pelican Grand Beach Resort

Fort Lauderdale is a city many travelers think they already know. I've been there countless times myself, and the famous strip with its Spring Break energy is familiar to many—if not by sight, then certainly by reputation. But just a short distance north, the atmosphere shifts. The noise fades, the beach opens, and the coastline feels almost dreamy. This is where Pelican Grand Beach Resort sits, in a prime oceanfront location with a luxurious feel and the kind of vibe that makes you instantly rethink what Fort Lauderdale can be.

The first thing you notice is the architecture of the building itself: graceful, historic, and anchored by its iconic oceanfront porch. A long row of white rocking chairs faces the Atlantic, allowing you to sway gently in the breeze. Film buffs may get a kick out of the fact that this porch looks like the one used in the filming of Some Like It Hot.

Pelican Grand is one of those rare properties that makes vacationing with kids feel easy. The beach is swimmable and safe, without the riptides or strong currents that many South Florida shorelines have. Families float along the lazy river beside the pool, and the poolside menu offers genuinely excellent bites, far better than typical resort fare.

If you want to truly unwind here, plan on a minimum of four nights. Anything less will feel rushed. My sister and I did not even rent a car; we never needed one. Uber is inexpensive for a nearby excursion, and the resort has everything you need to settle in and stay put.

I loved OCEAN2000, the restaurant at the resort, enough to eat dinner there both nights. The seafood is exceptional, the steak perfectly done, and the crowd a mix of travelers and stylish locals who clearly know where to find quality. The crab and lobster cakes were standouts, and the Caribbean lobster and local grouper were exactly what you hope to find in South Florida.

Executive chef Steve Mendez, who has been with Noble House Hotels for over seven years, brings a steady hand and refined approach to the menu. Noble House has managed the property for many years, and the consistency shows.

La Veranda

The famous veranda to enjoy Florida's breeze

Private massage with ocean views

The hotel's owner, Swedish businessperson Bo Jertshagen, opened the resort in 2009 and invested $7 million in renovations in 2019. There is a subtle Scandinavian sensibility throughout, with clean lines, calming tones, and an emphasis on comfort without clutter.

Atop the hotel, on the 11th-floor rooftop, sits one of the best spas in South Florida: PURE Spa. If you've tried many of the region's top spas, as I have, this one stands out immediately.

PURE Spa opened in 2015, the vision of Pelican Grand CEO Cassandra Jertshagen, who led its concept and development from the beginning. Inspired by Swedish well-being, the spa pairs restorative treatments with panoramic ocean views and features a signature partnership with Swedish skin-care brand Maria Åkerberg. The space spans nearly 3,000 square feet and includes three serene indoor treatment rooms, two outdoor oceanfront cabanas, and a relaxation lounge with hanging chairs overlooking the sea.

Whitewashed wood, soft green accents, and floor-to-ceiling glass create a sanctuary where the horizon feels like it enters the room. The spa's guiding mantra, "You Are Beautiful," is woven into the experience, not as branding but as a gentle reminder.

The oceanfront penthouse treatment suite is PURE Spa's crown jewel. With chandeliers and wraparound windows framing the Atlantic, it is a fantasy suite for couples. It is the kind of space that makes you stop speaking mid-sentence just to take in the view. Come an hour before your treatment to enjoy the quiet of rooftop lounge chairs. You can even order lunch from room service.

Pelican Grand and PURE Spa together offer a quieter, more refined interpretation of Fort Lauderdale, one where oceanfront luxury, Scandinavian calm, and genuine ease come together effortlessly. It is the kind of place you return to not just for vacation but for restoration. And once you have experienced this softer side of the city, it is hard to imagine Fort Lauderdale any other way.

CELEBRATE U.S. OPEN SEASON AT LOEWS REGENCY NEW YORK

By Helena Harlow

Few events capture the energy of late summer in New York quite like the U.S. Open. For two weeks each year, the city's restaurants, hotels, and cocktail bars embrace the excitement as tennis fans from around the world descend on Manhattan and Queens for one of the sport's most celebrated tournaments.

For those looking to make a weekend of it, Loews Regency New York Hotel offers an elegant home base on the Upper East Side. Perfectly positioned near some of the city's best shopping, dining, and cultural attractions, the iconic property makes it easy to enjoy everything New York has to offer before and after a day at the matches.

This season, the hotel is inviting guests to extend the experience with its Tailgate Rate package, designed for visitors planning a U.S. Open getaway. Whether you're attending the tournament or simply enjoying the unmistakable buzz that takes over the city during tennis season, Loews Regency delivers the comfort and classic New York sophistication that have made it a longtime favorite.

Of course, no U.S. Open celebration would be complete without the tournament's signature Honey Deuce. Throughout the tournament, guests can sip the iconic cocktail at The Regency Bar & Grill, bringing a taste of the Open to Manhattan. What began as the tournament's signature drink has become a tradition in its own right, with the Honey Deuce now synonymous with the U.S. Open experience.

For those planning to be in the city during tennis season, Loews Regency New York Hotel offers an effortless way to experience the excitement, whether headed courtside or simply raising a Honey Deuce to one of New York's favorite annual traditions.

EITCH BORROMINI

ROME

By Gregory DelliCarpini Jr.
Photography by Lorenzo Vinti

There are hotels that offer a sense of place, and then there are hotels that become the destination itself. Tucked inside the magnificent 17th-century Palazzo Pamphilj overlooking Piazza Navona, Eitch Borromini is one of those rare properties where history, architecture, and contemporary luxury exist in perfect conversation. Designed by the legendary Baroque architect Francesco Borromini, the palace has welcomed aristocrats, clergy, and artists for centuries. Today, it invites a new generation of discerning travelers to experience Rome from one of its most extraordinary addresses.

The location is nothing short of exceptional. Step outside and you're immersed in the timeless theater of Piazza Navona, where Bernini's Fountain of the Four Rivers anchors one of Europe's most iconic squares. From here, the Pantheon, Campo de' Fiori, the Spanish Steps, and countless galleries, boutiques, and cafés are all within an easy stroll, making the hotel an ideal base for discovering the Eternal City on foot. Yet despite sitting in the heart of Rome, Eitch Borromini somehow manages to feel remarkably intimate—a peaceful retreat hidden above the city's lively rhythm.

The thoughtful evolution of Eitch Borromini's accommodations is evident in several newly redesigned suites that celebrate the grandeur of the historic palace while embracing a cleaner, more contemporary aesthetic. Original frescoed ceilings, centuries-old fireplaces, and architectural details have been carefully preserved, then paired with bespoke furnishings, rich marble, warm woods, and luxurious textiles that create an atmosphere of understated elegance rather than museum-like formality. The result is a seamless blend of heritage and modern comfort that is authentic and refreshingly current. Some of the most spectacular suites feature sweeping views over Piazza Navona, while others reveal intimate glimpses of Rome's storied rooftops and church domes.

No stay is complete without lingering on Terrazza Borromini, the hotel's panoramic rooftop, where breakfast, cocktails, or dinner unfold against one of the city's most cinematic skylines. As church bells echo across Rome and the golden light settles over the domes of the Pantheon and St. Peter's Basilica, it's easy to understand why this address has captivated visitors for generations.

Eitch Borromini succeeds because it never tries to compete with Rome—it simply becomes part of its ambiance. Equal parts architectural masterpiece, refined retreat, and unforgettable vantage point, it is a hotel that reminds travelers that true luxury isn't just about beautiful rooms. It's about waking each morning inside history while experiencing the very best of the city just beyond your window. Head to eitchborromini.com to book your stay.

A FRESH PERSPECTIVE ON WATERFRONT LIVING

By Laura Hearst

A waterfront home should feel connected to its surroundings, and at 24 Midway Street in Babylon village, the water is part of the experience from the moment one arrives. Newly constructed in 2025 and represented by Joe Granieri of Nest Seekers International, the contemporary residence offers four bedrooms, three full baths, one half bath, and approximately 3,000 square feet of living space along a quiet canal.

Inside, 10-foot ceilings on the main level and expansive windows create a bright, airy atmosphere. The open floor plan was designed for easy entertaining, allowing the kitchen, dining area, and living room to flow naturally into one another. Custom two-tone cabinetry, stone countertops, stainless-steel appliances, and a large center island give the kitchen a clean, modern character, while a natural gas fireplace brings warmth to the principal gathering space.

The primary suite offers its own sense of retreat, with marble finishes, a spa-inspired bathroom, and generous walk-in closet space. A second fireplace is located in a bedroom, adding another distinctive detail to the home.

Much of the property's appeal lies beneath its polished surfaces. Construction features include a helical pile foundation, an engineered floor system, spray-foam insulation, energy-efficient windows, three-zone gas heating, and central air. Outside, the stucco façade is softened by natural-stone accents, while glass balcony railings preserve the waterfront views. A stone patio overlooking the canal creates an inviting setting for summer dinners, cocktails at sunset, or quiet mornings beside the water.

The private bulkhead and canal access make the home particularly appealing to buyers drawn to the South Shore lifestyle. At the same time, its proximity to Babylon village places restaurants, shops, and Long Island Rail Road service within easy reach. Currently offered at $1,799,995, the property brings a distinctly Hamptons-inspired sensibility to one of Long Island's most established waterfront communities.

Granieri is a licensed real estate salesperson, real estate adviser, and team leader with Nest Seekers International. His work spans luxury homes, waterfront estates, new development, and investment opportunities across Long Island, the Hamptons, New York City, and select international markets. Since joining the firm in 2024, he has expanded his practice to include development strategy, hospitality-driven real estate, and lifestyle advisory, an approach well suited to a property that is as much about how one lives as where one lives.

A FRESH TAKE ON SOUTHAMPTON LIVING

244 NORTH SEA MECOX ROAD IN SOUTHAMPTON

By Kaiya Hilton

244 North Sea Mecox Road, Southampton

Less than two miles from Southampton village and minutes from the ocean beaches, the newly completed residence at 244 North Sea Mecox Road offers a polished interpretation of modern Hamptons living. Listed at $3.895 million, the home features six bedrooms, seven full bathrooms, two powder rooms, and 5,800 square feet of living space across three finished levels. Set on half an acre, it combines the ease of new construction with a location close to the restaurants, boutiques, and coastal charm that have made Southampton one of the East End's most sought-after destinations.

Designed by architect Ryan Kesner, the traditional-style residence opens with a grand foyer and an airy floor plan that balances elegance and everyday comfort. The main level features formal living and dining rooms, an expansive great room with one of two fireplaces, and a chef's kitchen complete with premium appliances and a butler's pantry. A first-floor en suite bedroom offers flexibility for guests or multigenerational living, while a mudroom and laundry room provide practical convenience.

Upstairs, the primary suite serves as a private retreat with its own fireplace, dual walk-in closets, spa-inspired bath, and a balcony overlooking the backyard. Three additional en suite bedrooms, a bonus room, and a second laundry room complete the level. The finished lower level expands the home's versatility with a sixth en suite bedroom, fitness room, powder room, and generous recreation space, making it equally suited for entertaining or extended stays.

Outside, three sets of sliding glass doors create a seamless connection between the interior and the backyard, where a heated 20-by-40-foot gunite pool anchors the outdoor living space. A covered porch and spacious patio provide inviting settings for everything from quiet mornings to summer gatherings with family and friends.

Representing the property is Vincent Abbate of Nest Seekers International. A Southampton native, Abbate offers clients the advantage of lifelong local knowledge and a genuine appreciation for the Hamptons lifestyle.

Abbate has consistently ranked among Nest Seekers' top-performing Hamptons agents. His deep roots in the community, combined with a thoughtful understanding of the luxury market, make him an ideal representative for a home that captures the best of contemporary Southampton living.

LIVING WELL ON THE NORTH FORK

By Kaiya Hilton

1810 Main Road in Jamesport

Morning light spills across vineyard rows. Boats drift out toward Peconic Bay. Farm stands fill with just-picked produce, and miles away from the rush of city life, the North Fork moves at its own pace. Increasingly, that's exactly the point.

Luxury real estate has entered a new era. Today's buyers aren't simply searching for beautiful homes—they're searching for a better way to live.

Across the North Fork, Douglas Elliman's Kristy Naddell has watched that evolution unfold firsthand. Whether her clients are relocating full-time from Manhattan, trading the pace of the South Fork for a quieter coastal lifestyle, or purchasing a second home, the conversation has shifted well beyond square footage and finishes.

"People are thinking differently about where they want to spend their time," says Naddell. "Some are looking for a weekend retreat while others are making the North Fork their full-time home. What they all have in common is that they're looking for a place that feels authentic, connected to nature, and easy to enjoy every day."

That shift has transformed the market.

While demand remains healthy, today's buyers are far more intentional than they were just a few years ago. They're taking their time, comparing properties carefully and placing greater emphasis on quality, craftsmanship, and long-term value.

"Turnkey homes continue to command the greatest interest, while properties requiring significant renovation often face a more measured response," Naddell says. "Waterfront properties, exceptional land, thoughtfully designed new construction, privacy, pools, and homes with architectural significance continue to perform well. Buyers are patient until the right property comes along. Then they're ready to act."

As Douglas Elliman's No. 1 agent on the North Fork, Naddell has built her business by understanding not only today's market but the lifestyle that continues to draw people east.

"The North Fork feels very much like the Hamptons used to," she says. "It has beautiful beaches, vineyards, boating, incredible restaurants, and farm stands, but it still feels grounded. There's a real sense of community here."

That authenticity continues to attract buyers from Manhattan, Brooklyn, Westchester, Nassau County, Florida, and even the South Fork. This year alone, Naddell has worked with several clients who traded East Hampton, Southampton, and Westhampton for the North Fork's slower pace, greater privacy, and enduring connection to the outdoors.

Her current portfolio reflects the many ways today's luxury buyers define "living well."

21515 Soundview Avenue in Southold

In Cutchogue, the Barnes Coy–designed waterfront residence at 445 Glen Court demonstrates architecture at its most enduring. Perched atop a dramatic bluff, the home was designed around the landscape rather than fleeting trends, creating a seamless relationship between light, water, and nature that feels timeless.

A few miles away, Naddell's remarkable listing at 1810 Main Road in Jamesport tells a different story. Set on more than 6 acres, the estate combines a private vineyard, premier equestrian facilities, mature orchards, beehives, raised gardens, and a thoughtfully designed art studio with luxury amenities including a heated saltwater pool, wine-barrel sauna, outdoor kitchen, and putting green. More than a spectacular property, it reflects one of the defining trends shaping today's market: buyers seeking homes that support wellness, sustainability, and a deeper connection to the land.

"People are asking different questions than they were even a few years ago," Naddell says. "They're looking for spaces that support the way they want to live, whether that's a home gym, a sauna, room for extended family, outdoor entertaining, or simply enough land to create something that's uniquely their own."

That same lifestyle-first mindset is fueling demand for exceptional new construction. At Sea Crest Estates in Jamesport, an exclusive collection of just 13 luxury residences by Modern Age Builders, buyers are finding timeless architecture, sophisticated finishes, and modern efficiency moments from Iron Pier Beach. Designed for effortless living, the homes offer exactly what today's market increasingly demands: the ability to arrive, unpack, and immediately begin enjoying the East End.

Then there are homes that capture the everyday magic of the North Fork itself. At 21515 Soundview Avenue in Southold, sweeping views across the Long Island Sound, direct beach access, and extraordinary sunsets become part of daily life. Beautifully renovated and thoughtfully designed, the waterfront retreat features expansive outdoor living spaces and a rare, grandfathered platform at the water's edge—an idyllic setting for everything from morning yoga to sunset cocktails.

Taken together, these homes tell the story of an evolving market, where experiences matter as much as amenities and lifestyle has become luxury's most valuable asset.

For Naddell, that's what has always made the North Fork so special. It offers a rare combination of natural beauty, community, and understated luxury that feels increasingly valuable in today's fast-moving world.

In the end, the greatest luxury may no longer be owning an extraordinary home. It may simply be living well on the North Fork.

A WATERFRONT COMPOUND BUILT FOR TODAY—AND WHAT COMES NEXT

By David Andrews

Sarah Minardi

In East Hampton, true rarity is recognized in what cannot be re-created. Along Three Mile Harbor Drive, nearly 3.5 waterfront acres, two separately deeded parcels, and almost 300 feet of shoreline come together in an irreplaceable compound opportunity.

The setting is private, but never isolated. Positioned in Northwest Woods between East Hampton and Sag Harbor villages, the property looks across Three Mile Harbor toward Gardiner's Bay, surrounded by some of the East End's most peaceful water.

As rare as the compound opportunity, the water view that comes into view as you approach the main home is unbelievable.

"Most compelling is that you do not have to choose between enjoying it now and planning for the future," says Sarah Minardi of Saunders & Associates, who represents the property exclusively. "The main house is beautifully resolved, the waterfront is extraordinary, and the second parcel gives a buyer options that are increasingly difficult to find anywhere in the Hamptons."

Thoughtfully reimagined for contemporary living, the 4,575-square-foot main residence keeps its attention firmly on the view. Walls of glass fill the interiors with changing light, while a dramatic double-height great room, expansive gathering spaces, and chef's kitchen establish a sophisticated, comfortable rhythm. Four en suite bedrooms include a primary suite with a private waterfront balcony and panoramic outlook.

The finished lower level opens directly to the landscaped grounds and shoreline, making it feel connected to the water rather than removed from the house. A gentle path leads to the sandy edge, where kayaks and paddleboards can launch directly into the harbor.

62 and 64 Three Mile Harbor Drive, East Hampton

Outside, broad waterside terraces, covered dining areas, a heated pool with a custom waterfall, and a pool house create a complete summer setting. The experience is polished, but the landscape remains the star.

The separately deeded second parcel transforms the property from a singular residence into a true compound. The existing guest cottage offers immediate accommodations while preserving the possibility of a substantially larger home and potential pool.

"There is real value in flexibility, especially when it comes with this much land and waterfront," Minardi says. "Someone can create a multi-home compound, maintain a separate guesthouse, or simply protect the privacy and openness that already make the property so special."

Its greatest value extends beyond additional building potential: a finished waterfront lifestyle today, rare flexibility for tomorrow, and room for the estate to evolve for generations in one extraordinary place on the water.

MARK GREENWALD'S LEGAL EXPERIENCE LEADS TO REAL ESTATE SUCCESS

By David Andrews

Mark Greenwald

MARK GREENWALD IS AS SMART AS A LAWYER AND AS APPROACHABLE AS A REAL ESTATE AGENT. WHICH MAKES PERFECT SENSE: HE IS BOTH.

With more than two decades of top-tier experience in Hamptons real estate and a J.D. from Cornell Law, Greenwald has become a go-to adviser for clients who value deep expertise, steady guidance, and, above all, results. His legal background sharpens his eye for detail, but his real advantage is knowing how to translate complexity into clear, practical advice clients can use with confidence.

In 2026, Greenwald ranked among the top 1% of real estate agents nationwide and in the top 10 agents in the Hamptons—his success is impressive, but hardly accidental.

There is busy, and then there is Mark Greenwald busy. Last September, over just 45 days, he completed 10 Hamptons transactions totaling $64,830,000. For those counting, that averages approximately $1.4 million per day, or nearly $60,000 per hour.

These are Hamptons homes and significant estates, each carrying a story, a legacy, and a client entrusting him with one of life's biggest decisions. That responsibility is never lost on him.

Behind every transaction is meticulous research, legal acuity, and preparation that make a complicated process manageable. Greenwald is a strategist who understands that presentation matters—both how a property is positioned and how an agent shows up. His listings are thoughtfully prepared, his advice is direct, and he personally attends every showing. In an increasingly impersonal business, that level of involvement makes an impression.

So does Greenwald himself. He is polished without being stiff, confident without being imposing, and serious about the work without taking himself too seriously. Clients respond to that balance. So do other agents.

His connection to the East End is equally personal. Greenwald raised his family here and understands the Hamptons not simply as a luxury market but a place where people build lives. Ask him about his kids and watch his face light up. His smile will tell you everything you need to know about the man behind the numbers.

Presentation, personality, and preparation account for much of Greenwald's steady ascent. Yet the clearest explanation may be simpler: He knows his market, knows his clients, and arrives ready. In Hamptons real estate, that combination is difficult to beat.

The Hamptons' art market consistently demonstrates remarkable strength, generating worldwide interest thanks to the participation of a host of exceptional artists working in various artistic mediums as well as the visionary galleries and an enthusiastic community of collectors.

From Martinez Art Gallery's presentation of acclaimed painter Lucy Cookson and international sculptor Oscar Molina at the vibrant Hamptons Fine Art Fair to Bonnie Druker's artist presentation in the town of Southampton, the season is celebrating creativity at every turn.

We welcome you to join us at the Stella Flame Gallery, which also features a solo show by Lucy Cookson. Also consider visiting Julie Keys Gallery at the American Hotel, where you can view Oscar Molina's most recent sculptures. These exhibitions all reflect a flourishing cultural landscape where contemporary art continues to inspire, connect, and thrive.

JAMES KATSIPIS

RENOWNED FINE ART PHOTOGRAPHER

By Courtney Daniels

James Katsipis, Ditch at Dusk, 2019

James Katsipis

James Katsipis is a Montauk- and Manhattan-based fine art photographer whose career has been defined by the ocean. Born and raised in Montauk, Katsipis grew up surrounded by the sea, which became his greatest inspiration and lifelong muse. His fascination with photography began in high school, when he first learned to develop film and quickly became captivated by photographing the natural world around him. What started as skipping class to photograph professional surfers soon evolved into his first published assignment with Eastern Surf magazine, launching a career that now spans more than two decades.

Known for his exceptional ocean photography and striking visual art, Katsipis has traveled the globe documenting seascapes and coastlines. His unique process depends on patience and immersion; he spends time studying the rhythm of the environment before lifting his camera. Katsipis has spent more than 20 years transforming his lifelong connection to oceans into a distinctive body of fine art photography. The ocean has remained his primary muse, shaping both his life and his lens. His work is a technical and emotional study of the natural elements, capturing the raw, cinematic energy of the coast from his home shores in Montauk to remote destinations around the world.

An explorer by nature, Katsipis has traveled across Iceland, Peru, Ireland, Panama, and beyond, immersing himself in extraordinary coastal landscapes and capturing the power, beauty, and emotion of the natural world. His photography has been featured in fine art galleries, books, magazines, major campaigns, and private collections worldwide. He has collaborated with an impressive roster of global brands, including Estée Lauder, La Mer, Donna Karan, Volcom, Patagonia, and Pucci to name a few, establishing him as a compelling voice in contemporary ocean, adventure, and fine art photography.

James Katsipis's fine art and commissioned photography have been exhibited in galleries worldwide and featured in major media publications. His celebrated portraiture series, Mermaids of Montauk, exemplifies his ability to merge myth, fantasy, and environmental reverence. The series has captivated audiences through exhibitions, residencies, and media features.

A dedicated environmental advocate, Katsipis is deeply involved in ocean preservation and the protection of Montauk's natural coastline. He has worked alongside organizations including The Nature Conservancy, Surf Rider Foundation, and the Save the Wave East Coast Film Festival to raise awareness about the importance of conservation. His photography not only celebrates the majesty of the sea but also serves as a vital tool for advocacy and education.

In addition to his ocean-inspired work, Katsipis is an accomplished portrait artist whose images capture deep emotion and authenticity. His photography has been widely published and collected, allowing admirers to bring a piece of Montauk's magic into their homes. Through artistry, exploration, and activism, Katsipis has become one of today's most dynamic photographers.

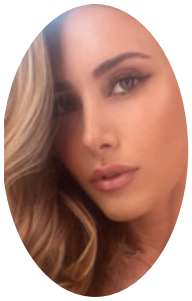

Three years ago, he opened his own namesake gallery in his hometown, in the heart of Montauk, giving viewers a chance to step into his world, see his work firsthand, and have an opportunity to meet the artist.

RACHEL'S RADAR

LONDON & SAINT-TROPEZ, SUMMER 2026

By Rachel Heller

Writer, actress, host, and art adviser Rachel Heller is a sponsorship and brand relations manager at Talent Resources
@rachelhellerxo | @talentresources | talentresources.com

This summer I moved between London and Saint-Tropez with my camera, collecting whatever stopped me. Botticelli's Madonna still breathing inside her frame. Cecily Brown's tangled, living landscapes at the Serpentine. Marilyn's smile on the walls of the National Portrait Gallery for her centenary. The dark bronze globe outside the Dorchester catching the light on Park Lane. A Picasso that felt like it was looking back. And in Saint-Tropez, the temporary museum at Salle Jean-Despas, the postcard racks full of Bardot, the late light on the façades.

Classical next to contemporary. Sculpture next to street. Glamour next to quiet looking. Nothing arranged for effect, just the places and the paintings that held me. These pieces are simply the ones I couldn't stop returning to.

BOOK REVIEWS

By Winter Fairchild

Michelle Grace

I'm Right Here

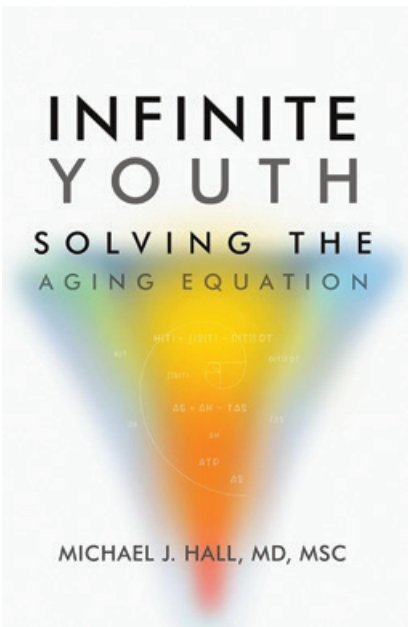

Few books capture the bond between parent and child with as much tenderness and imagination as I'm Right Here. Michelle Grace blends lyrical prose with breathtaking, dreamlike illustrations to tell a story that reassures children that love is constant, even when life feels uncertain. Journeying through galaxies, forests, oceans, and star-filled skies, each page reminds young readers that they are deeply seen, profoundly loved, and forever connected to those who care for them. The book's poetic message celebrates belonging, resilience, and unconditional love without ever being overly sentimental. A beautiful bedtime read and a keepsake parents will treasure long after the final page, I'm Right Here is destined to become a beloved family classic.

Harriet Newman Cohen

Passion and Power:
A Life in Three Worlds

Harriet Newman Cohen's Passion and Power is an engrossing memoir that chronicles the extraordinary life of one of America's pioneering divorce attorneys. With candor, intelligence, and wit, Cohen reflects on decades spent breaking barriers in a profession long dominated by men while navigating the complex intersection of law, family, ambition, and personal resilience. Her stories move seamlessly from courtroom drama to intimate reflections, offering readers an insider's view of the emotional realities behind high-profile legal battles. More than a memoir, it is a portrait of a woman who helped reshape her profession while remaining deeply committed to justice and humanity. It's an inspiring read for anyone fascinated by leadership, perseverance, and remarkable lives.

Dr. Michael Hall

Infinite Youth:
Solving the Aging Equation

In Infinite Youth, Dr. Michael Hall explores the rapidly evolving science of longevity with an approach both accessible and optimistic. Drawing on the latest research in preventive medicine, metabolism, cellular health, and personalized wellness, Hall challenges conventional ideas about aging and presents a road map for extending not just lifespan but health span. Rather than promising miracle cures, he emphasizes evidence-based strategies designed to help readers maintain vitality and reduce the risk of age-related disease. Complex concepts are translated into practical insights that encourage readers to take control of their long-term health. Thought-provoking and forward-looking, Infinite Youth offers an inspiring glimpse into what the future of healthy aging holds.

THE READING ROOM

By Zibby Owens

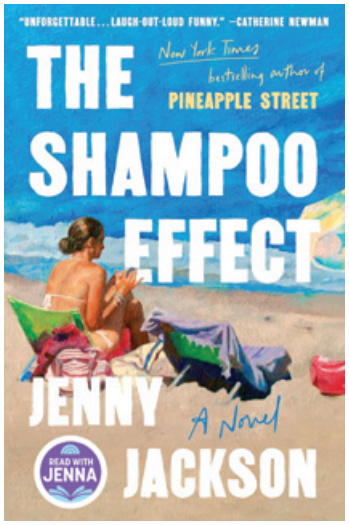

How is the summer almost over? I feel like it just started! There's still time to dive into some spectacular books before the craziness of September begins. Here are a few of my favorites.

Robinne Lee

Crash Into Me

From the author of The Idea of You, which was turned into a movie with Anne Hathaway, comes a new, darker, more introspective look at a woman in crisis. A Black married woman with children in the mostly white enclave of Brentwood, in Los Angeles, is tempted to take up with a woman from her past. It'll take you to Paris and L.A.

Jenny Jackson

The Shampoo Effect

Jenny Jackson is a star editor herself, so it's no surprise that her new book, The Shampoo Effect, has been selected as a Read With Jenna pick, a Barnes & Noble pick, and a Book of the Month pick! If you're in the mood to join a new group of friends at that pivotal moment when some are starting to have kids, others are still dating, some have achieved career success, and others are still wobbly, then dive right in.

Sarah Damoff

The Burning Side

I was bawling on a plane when I finished this book—and not just because I didn't want it to end. It's about a couple on the brink of divorce when their home burns down and they're forced to move into the wife's family's home, where, it turns out, her father has been hiding early-onset Alzheimer's. It's about love, forgiveness, loyalty, rebuilding, and trust.

Jane Costello

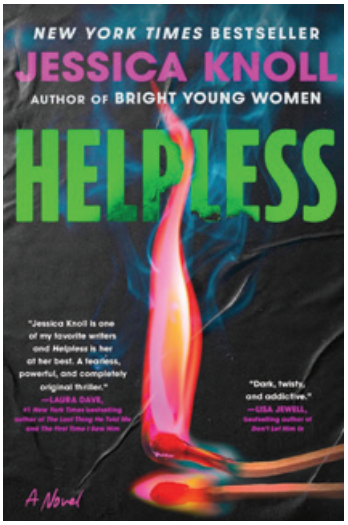

Forty Love

For tennis addicts and newbies alike. Join Jules as she takes up the sport after her daughter leaves for a gap year. She'll learn more than tennis; she'll take up with a blast from her past, navigate friendships in midlife, dish with her brother, and finally give herself permission to let joy back in her life.

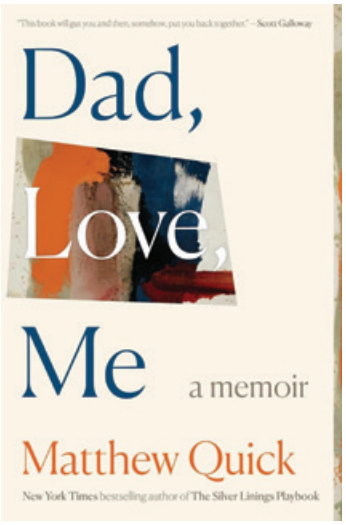

Laure Frankel
Enormous Wings

The last thing anyone expects happens in this hilarious but poignant story about a grandmother who moves into an old-age home—and becomes pregnant. Yes, it's that funny.

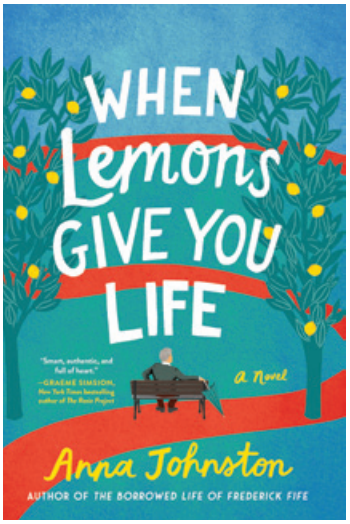

Jessica Knoll
Helpless

There are a zillion twists and turns in this fabulous, immersive tale about a group of friends who reunite for a professor's funeral and resolve to find out the truth behind what happened.

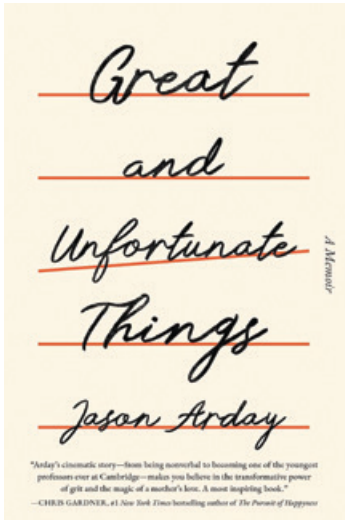

Matthew Quick
Dad, Love, Me

The author of Silver Linings Playbook, which was made into a film with Jennifer Lawrence, shares from the depths of his soul in a memoir about his difficult father, an abusive alcoholic; his struggles navigating success and creativity; and the therapy that got him back to baseline.

Anna Johnston
When Lemons Give You Life

I didn't expect to completely fall in love with this book, but I did. Anna Johnston writes about a fictitious Michelin-star chef who is so depressed in an elder-care facility that he decides to take his own life only to have cooking and food give him a new sense of purpose. It's really about the relationships that make life worth living.

Jason Arday
Great and Unfortunate Things

This stellar story needs to be a movie. An autistic boy who couldn't read or write and whom society had written off ends up getting a Ph.D. and becoming a Cambridge professor against all odds. Inspiring, uplifting, and truly magical.

DEBUT AUTHOR MICHELLE GRACE AND THE WONDERS OF MOTHERHOOD

By Jeremy Murphy

Michelle Grace

Theresa Balderas

Michelle Grace did not set out to write a children's book. She intended to save a feeling.

Her debut picture book, I'm Right Here, arriving October 6, began as a private act of devotion to her daughter, Mira. Endorsed by parenting educator Dr. Vanessa Lapointe, it is a lyrical, meditative story about the cosmic bond between mother and child, told through the sparkling image of two stars finding each other in the vast universe.

THE GENESIS OF I'M RIGHT HERE

"I wrote the book when I was completely in my feelings," Michelle Grace says. "It was an outlet for me to just be creative and express how I'm feeling and freeze a moment in time."

That idea, art as a "frozen moment in time," sits at the heart of I'm Right Here. The book follows the emotional, nonlinear journey of motherhood as something destined, mysterious, and written in the stars. In the story, a child feels the steady presence of a mother's love, a love that surrounds and reassures. Even very young readers still learning the language of the world can understand its deepest message: You are safe, you are loved, and I am right here.

For Michelle Grace, that message is inseparable from Mira. Before her daughter arrived, she had not realized how much of herself had gone quiet. She had spent years building a life in New York, the city that had shaped her since childhood, but somewhere along the way, her spark had dimmed.

Then came Mira, whose name means "my reflection," and everything changed.

"I feel like I had been blinded before her," Michelle Grace says. "And now I'm so alive."

BUILDING AN UNBREAKABLE BOND

Mira came into her life through surrogacy, a journey she describes as difficult for both mother and child. Because the process did not feel natural to her, Michelle Grace immersed herself in early childhood development, determined to understand how to deepen their bond. She has described the experience "like adopting your own child," a beginning that required patience, tenderness, and trust. It was during those early days that she discovered the power of creative play as a bridge.

"You sit on the floor with your kid, and you play with them, and you say nothing is more important than this right now," she says. "Every toy has a different voice. Every voice, every tone is different. Every walk is different. You really have to get into character."

That instinct to enter a child's world now shapes Michelle Grace's work as an author. Her books are rooted in the belief that children are wired for wonder and that what parents pour into those early years matters profoundly. She sees imagination as a force that can nurture problem solving, emotional resilience, and connection to the natural world rather than something frivolous.

REKINDLING HER SPARK

Michelle Grace has always been creative. At 20, she wrote "Higher," a No. 1 Billboard dance hit for Deborah Cox. But motherhood reignited something deeper. "When you have passion and life again, you start being creative again," she says.

That revived creativity led to I'm Right Here, which Michelle Grace calls a way of saying "thank you" to Mira and "hello" to the world as an author. The book's gentle tone is matched by illustrations she discovered almost by chance. After an early illustrator's sample failed to capture the feeling she wanted, Michelle Grace looked at artwork hanging in her office and realized she had already found the visual language of the book. She contacted the artist overseas, whose work in maternal themes felt "unbelievably beautiful, touching, and inspiring."

MORE WORLDS OF WONDER AHEAD

More books are already on the way. Her second, My Wild Imagination, is scheduled for February and follows a little girl named Anna and her big, furry "Wild Imagination," who makes life brighter, bolder, and wilder. Together they splash through puddles as wide as the sea, slide down rainbows into magical gardens, and learn to speak butterfly. A third book, Welcome Home, Little Fairy, is planned for spring. Michelle Grace says each book will have a different illustrator because "every vibe" is different.

For all the ambition ahead, the emotional center remains simple. The ideas, Michelle Grace says, all come from her daughter.

In a culture that often treats parenthood as logistics, Michelle Grace is writing from the place beneath all that—from the floor, with the toys, the voices, the wonder, and the awe. I'm Right Here is not just a children's book. It is a record of a mother being remade by love.

VITAL AGIBALOW

CELEBRITY PHOTOGRAPHER AND HENSEL AMBASSADOR

By Brady Goodman-Williams

Vital Agibalow

When we imagine editorial and celebrity photo shoots, we think of high intensity, glamour, and many moving pieces. Makeup, hair, and fashion stylists run around with urgency, all under the auspices of a demanding photographer. But after seeing one special photographer on set with Nigel Barker, Carol Alt, Irina Pantaeva, and Iris Apfel, I can attest that Vital Agibalow truly breaks the mold.

As he worked the camera in quick bursts of intensity, he never lost the professional yet inviting half-smile from his face—and the effects were visible. Most of us hesitate in the face of fame, but Agibalow's lighthearted and sensitive demeanor allowed his subjects to open up in ways I had never previously seen. The result? Portraits of each subject's inner being—comfortable, raw, and vulnerable.

I sat down with Vital Agibalow to learn some more about him and his work.

Where are you from? How did you become a photographer?
I'm New York–based, but my roots are in Sweden, Russia, and Ukraine. When I was 7, my dad gave me my first camera as a birthday present—a Zenith. I fell in love with it. I started taking portraits of the other kids in my neighborhood. There's something about portrait photography that has clearly inspired me since an early age. By 20, I had started working with local modeling agencies, and I opened my own business when I was 21.

How has your photography changed since then?
Those were the days when cameras used only film, and you didn't see the result of a shot until after the film was processed. As a photographer, you couldn't afford to make a mistake back then. Now everyone shoots digital, so you can see the shot on display, which makes it all so much easier. But I'm proud to say that I started as a film photographer.

Why does your background in film matter?
Well, it builds credibility. It makes me more professional than any newbie these days who starts with a digital camera and doesn't know what it means to shoot slides. You have to be much more accurate when doing so, and this skill enhances my digital photography.

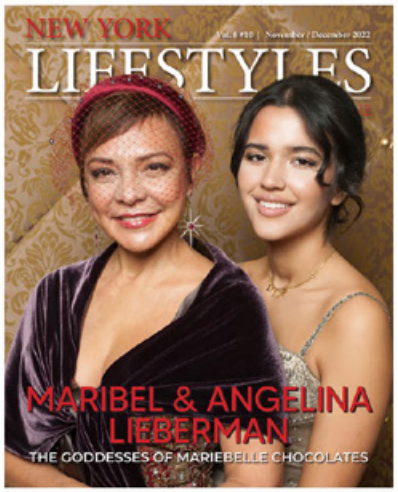

So I know you love portraits. Why is this your favorite genre?
I love working with people and seeing their reaction when they see themselves, sometimes in a whole new way. Bringing out a person's beauty and charm results in much joy to my subjects and their families. Right now, because of word of mouth, I have been doing a lot of physicians' portraits. But I do also work with fashion designers, which is a whole different world!

Who was the most challenging designer to shoot?
Probably shooting Karl Lagerfeld. Our time in the studio was limited to only 30 minutes, which is a photographer's worst nightmare! But the resulting portraits from the shoot were so good. He really liked the images, which is huge since he was a photographer himself. My portrait of Karl was published in BELLA magazine and many others, so the hard work paid off.

So changing gears a little bit. Do you have any recommendations for others interested in pursuing a career like yours?
Do it only if you really enjoy it. Don't do it for the money, but for the art. You'd be shocked at how much money you can make when you prioritize the art first.

Rob Rich / SocietyAllure.com

That's great advice. So what new projects are you working on right now? Where can I see your work?
I worked with the legendary supermodel Carol Alt for her new show on FNL Network, Carol Alt's Living Room. Also, I've been working with beauty and fashion bloggers like Kate Romanoff.

In 2020, the publisher of CAPRICE magazine in Crimea published a limited-edition coffee-table book called Super Models 2020, which features more than 70 pages of black-and-white photographs of supermodels from my work over the previous 10 years.

You have a brand partnership with HENSEL, right? Tell me a little about that.
HENSEL is a German brand that produces professional lights for photographers. I've been the brand ambassador for this company since 2008. I'm using its lights on each and every shoot, and I'm proud to promote them in my studio and through my work.

KIMBERLY PAIGE BLUHM

FOSTERING THE NEXT GENERATION OF VISIONARIES

By Jeremy Murphy

Kimberly Paige Bluhm

For Kimberly Paige Bluhm, art has never been solely about collecting paintings or attending gallery openings. It is about ensuring future generations understand the power of creativity. This philosophy has shaped her growing role as a philanthropist and arts advocate, culminating this year with her election to the board of the Norton Museum of Art in West Palm Beach.

Bluhm joins the museum during what she describes as an exciting period of growth. "The museum is now at a tipping point with this new phase of building," she says. "It's really exciting to be involved at this point."

She is especially eager to serve on the museum's education committee, where she hopes to strengthen ties between the Norton and the broader South Florida community. "I'm there to support its mission," Bluhm says. "Community access and lifelong learning of the arts are really extremely important to me."

CONNECTING MUSEUMS AND STUDENTS

One of Bluhm's first priorities is building a stronger relationship between the Norton Museum and the Alexander W. Dreyfoos School of the Arts, the nationally recognized public arts magnet school in West Palm Beach.

Already an active supporter of the Dreyfoos School of the Arts Foundation, Bluhm believes the two organizations can work together to create larger collaborative programs that encourage students to engage with the museum throughout their education. She first discovered the school when New York art adviser Kim Heirston encouraged her to visit.

"The minute I walked into that building and met those students, I was completely and utterly blown away," Bluhm recalls. "Their talent, their passion, their gratitude for being there. It's amazing." Admission to Dreyfoos is earned through auditions, attracting some of the state's most gifted young artists. The foundation helps provide everything from instruments and classroom resources to transportation and personal assistance for students facing financial challenges.

Bluhm works closely with the foundation to raise money and introduce new supporters to its mission. She also volunteers each spring by conducting mock interviews for seniors applying for college scholarships. "It's been one of the greatest joys of my life," she says. "Just to interact with those kids is incredible."

A PASSION YEARS IN THE MAKING

Before becoming a Palm Beach resident, Bluhm lived in Aspen, where she served on the board of Jazz Aspen Snowmass, a nonprofit organization that presents the renowned Labor Day music festival while raising significant funding for arts programs in Colorado public schools.

Capehart

Neil and Kimberly Paige Bluhm

As public funding for arts education declined, the organization stepped in to ensure students continued to receive music instruction and creative opportunities. When Bluhm relocated, she stepped away from the board for one simple reason. "I'm really a hands-on person," she says. "I wasn't going to be there anymore."

She immediately recognized many of the same values when she became involved with Dreyfoos. "The Dreyfoos School goes hand in hand with what Jazz Aspen has done," she says. "There's so much synergy there."

A COUPLE OF ART LOVERS

Although Bluhm has long appreciated museums and artists, she credits her husband, businessman and noted contemporary art collector Neil Bluhm, with expanding her understanding of the art world.

"I really learned a lot about art through my husband," she says. "He's taught me a lot over the last nine years and really encouraged my desire to learn more and to be more involved."

Her husband has served on the board of the Whitney Museum of American Art for nearly two decades and played an important role in the museum's move to Manhattan's Meatpacking District. Through that involvement, Bluhm regularly participates in trustee events, exhibition openings, and educational programs. "It's a phenomenal museum," she says. "I've really enjoyed meeting those people and sharing that with my husband."

Today, she describes herself simply: "I'm a lover of art."

LOOKING AHEAD

Although Bluhm divides her time among Palm Beach, Miami, Chicago, Aspen, New York, and Europe, her philanthropic focus remains firmly rooted in organizations that create lasting impact.

Whether she is introducing donors to the Dreyfoos Foundation, mentoring scholarship applicants, supporting the Norton Museum's educational mission, or participating in the cultural life of the Whitney, she believes meaningful involvement matters more than simply lending her name to a cause.

As the Norton Museum enters its next chapter, she hopes to help strengthen its role as both a cultural destination and an educational resource for South Florida. "My goal," she says, "is to help build bigger programs for the students and get them more involved with the museum."

Her mission is about far more than preserving art. It is about inspiring the next generation to discover it.

ARTHUR AIDALA

THE LAWYER BEHIND THE LEGACY

By Jeremy Murphy

Arthur Aidala

Arthur Aidala has spent more than three decades in criminal law, representing clients in federal and state courts across the country. He is an attorney, a managing partner, a legal analyst, a radio host, a former prosecutor, a husband, and a father. But when asked what his main focus is right now, Aidala does not start with a celebrity case or a television appearance.

"The big thing that I'm working on right now, honestly, is managing the law firm," he says.

That law firm is Aidala, Bertuna & Kamins, PC, known for high-profile defendants, complicated cases, and a willingness to step into storms that other lawyers might avoid. As the manager of criminal cases, civil litigation, appeals, and corporate matters, Aidala believes the firm's strength is not simply its fearlessness, but its range, its honesty, and its culture.

Long before he became one of New York's most recognizable defense attorneys, Aidala was a prosecutor. As a senior assistant district attorney in Kings County, he tried dozens of felony cases, from murder and rape to burglary and gun cases, during one of the most crime-ridden periods in New York City history.

That experience continues to shape his approach to criminal defense. He understands how prosecutors think because he once stood in their shoes.

"There are prosecutors who wield that power responsibly," he says. "And then there are those who you have to fight as hard as you can because they are abusing it."

One case of Aidala's remains especially personal: a New York City crane collapse. At the time, it was the largest crane accident in city history. Seven people died, and prosecutors were under enormous pressure to find someone criminally responsible. Aidala represented crane operator William Rapetti, who was offered a plea deal that would have resulted in roughly a year behind bars. Convinced his client was innocent, Aidala immersed himself in the technical details of crane operation. The pressure leading up to the verdict was overwhelming. "The day before was the first time I ever had stomach distress," he recalls.

When the verdict was finally reached, the courtroom was packed with family members, crane workers, prosecutors, reporters, and spectators. Rapetti was found not guilty, and that acquittal changed his life. "I opened up a door and it was a broom closet," Aidala recalls. "And I just fell on my knees and I was hysterically crying."

Years later, Aidala attended two of Rapetti's daughters' weddings. Every July 22, the anniversary of the verdict, he still receives a text message from his former client.

Despite the intensity of this work, Aidala rejects the stereotype of the cold, corporate law office. At the firm, there are birthday celebrations, lunch gatherings, and spontaneous legal debates. Lawyers routinely seek each other's opinions on cases. The firm's radio studio often becomes an impromptu gathering place whenever a major legal story breaks. Aidala hosts The Arthur Aidala Power Hour every weekday evening on AM 970 The Answer. During broadcasts, colleagues regularly join him to discuss important legal developments.

Udo Spreitzenbarth

"I try to create an environment that encourages camaraderie and collaboration because I think it's in the best interests of the clients," he says.

That culture is how Aidala ensures the firm will thrive long after he steps away. He actively pushes younger attorneys into leadership roles, giving them courtroom opportunities, media exposure, and responsibility. Recently, a federal judge asked why Aidala sat quietly in the back of a courtroom during an important proceeding. The answer was simple. The hearing belonged to one of his younger lawyers. "I don't want them to have to need me," he says. "I'm trying to create a little bit of a legacy." In his view, the ultimate measure of success would be seeing the practice continue decades after his retirement. Attorneys such as Imran Ansari, Michael Jaccarino, and Lino De Masi are examples of the next generation he hopes will lead the firm.

Away from work, Aidala's greatest joys are remarkably simple: family, friends, and community. He remains close with friends from kindergarten. He speaks passionately about his wife, longtime law partner, and soulmate, Marianne Bertuna, and their children.

Recently, he hosted 50 people at his home for Father's Day. His father, who is approaching 88, sat surrounded by friends. Across the yard, Aidala's young daughter splashed into the water. "You pinch yourself about how lucky I am," he says.

Arthur Aidala has spent decades handling some of the most difficult cases in America. He has represented controversial clients, won landmark appeals, and secured life-changing acquittals. Yet perhaps his most enduring achievement will not be a verdict or a headline. It may be the culture, community, and legacy he is building at Aidala, Bertuna & Kamins—a place where lawyers care deeply, clients feel heard, and the next generation is already preparing to carry the torch.

MARIANNE BERTUNA

A LAWYER GUIDED BY INTEGRITY, TRUST, AND A PASSION FOR HELPING OTHERS

By Jeremy Murphy

Marianne Bertuna

Marianne Bertuna has built a career defined by versatility and an unwavering commitment to serving others. As executive partner at Aidala, Bertuna & Kamins, she helps lead one of New York's busiest boutique law firms while maintaining a multifaceted practice.

Whether she is protecting an estate or mentoring other attorneys, Bertuna approaches every case with the same philosophy. "I am fueled by helping others," she said. "I use all of my ability and energy as an attorney to ensure that my client's trust is well placed." That commitment has garnered respect throughout New York's legal community and established her as one of the firm's driving forces.

AN EVER-EVOLVING CAREER

Today, Bertuna devotes much of her practice to serving as counsel to the Kings County public administrator in Brooklyn's Surrogate's Court, a position that puts her at the center of complicated estate matters.

Bertuna oversees litigation and responds to emergencies involving estate properties. One day may involve multiple closings, while another could require immediate action against squatters. But it's something that comes naturally to her. "My family has always been in the real estate world," she said. "I knew how to do a closing before I even became a lawyer."

BUILT ON CRIMINAL DEFENSE

Bertuna says criminal defense will always hold a special place in her heart. "I loved being in the courtroom every day," she said. Representing her clients taught her to think critically and remain calm under pressure.

That courtroom experience serves her well in Surrogate's Court, where emergencies regularly arise, and informs her work investigating fraudulent estate transactions, including one of New York's largest real estate fraud cases during the mortgage crisis.

Beyond the courtroom and the writing desk, Bertuna is equally devoted to giving back. She was a long-time president of the Columbian Lawyers Association, 1st Judicial Department, an association she has stayed close to, serving as chair for the department's annual Charles A. Rapallo and Justice Antonin Scalia Awards Luncheon. In addition to these vital roles, Bertuna is a trustee and member on the boards of the Brooklyn Bar Association and the Kings County Criminal Bar Association, and a former member of the Attorney Grievance Committee of the Appellate Division, 2nd Department. To top it all off, she serves as a board member of the Christian J. Santo Legacy Foundation.

A FAMILY FIRM WITH SHARED VALUES

Alongside her husband, defense attorney Arthur Aidala, Bertuna helps lead a firm known for high-profile cases. She believes representing controversial clients reflects a deep respect for the Constitution. "Every American is entitled to a defense," she said.

She credits the firm's collaborative culture as one of its greatest strengths. "We're a family," she said. "Our clients know they matter."

For Bertuna, success is found in preserving trust and honoring the responsibility that comes with practicing law. "A lawyer is part of a profession," she said. "It's not just a job."

RUSTIK CAKE STUDIO

THE SWEET ART OF CELEBRATION

By Emily Yorke

ROCIO FUKUDA OF RUSTIK CAKE STUDIO HAS BECOME ONE OF THE HAMPTONS' MOST SOUGHT-AFTER CAKE DESIGNERS BY TRANSFORMING LIFE'S BIGGEST MILESTONES INTO UNFORGETTABLE WORKS OF ART.

In the Hamptons, where life's biggest milestones are celebrated with extraordinary attention to detail, Rocio Fukuda has become one of the East End's most sought-after cake designers. Through Rustik Cake Studio, her custom creations have graced celebrations for everyone from local families to internationally recognized names, including Beyoncé, Metallica, Michelle Williams, Charles Woodson, Kaki Swid, and Sarah Lee. Her client list spans local families and celebrities alike, but for Fukuda, every cake begins in the same place—with the story of the person she's creating it for.

What began as a hobby soon became something much more. Whenever Fukuda arrived at a gathering with one of her cakes, she watched people's faces light up. Their excitement and gratitude made her realize that baking wasn't simply a creative outlet—it was a way to become part of life's happiest moments. "When I saw how happy people were when they received one of my cakes, I realized this passion wasn't just for my own joy—it was for the people celebrating with them," Fukuda says. Before long, her passion naturally evolved into a thriving business.

That approach continues to guide every cake she creates. Rather than beginning with a particular aesthetic, Fukuda starts with her clients themselves. Their personalities, interests, and memories inspire every design, whether it's a whimsical 101 Dalmatians–themed cake for a grandmother's 101st birthday or a custom creation celebrating a lifelong passion. Every commission becomes a reflection of the person—and the moment—it celebrates.

Rocio Fukuda

Over the years, Fukuda has become more than a cake designer; she has become part of her clients' family traditions. Some have returned to Rustik Cake Studio every year for more than a decade, allowing her to watch their children grow, one birthday at a time. "Every year is a story that I get to be part of. I get to watch my clients grow while sharing these special moments with them year after year," she says. Her favorite tradition, however, is creating her own son's birthday cake each year—a promise she hopes to keep for as long as she can.

As a single mother, Fukuda intentionally built Rustik Cake Studio around the life she wanted for her family. Operating from a commissary kitchen rather than a storefront has given her the flexibility to be present for her son while continuing to grow a business built almost entirely through word of mouth and loyal clients.

Looking ahead, Fukuda is excited to introduce new collaborations and products, but what continues to inspire her most is the opportunity to celebrate life's milestones alongside the families who have supported her from the very beginning. One cake at a time, she isn't simply creating desserts—she's helping create memories that will be cherished for years to come.

BREWING IN THE EAST END

HOPS, SMASHES, AND BOCCE

By Sharon Roth

August is finally upon us, and every moment feels like a golden hour. Summer chill vibes have taken over all. As we slowly meander from morning yoga to beach to boat to sunset, it's time to start savoring the East End's rich array of chilled local beers, the perfect addition to our lingering, toes-in-the-sand afternoons. Thankfully, local Hamptons breweries offer uniquely crafted options that complement these radiant August days, producing everything from crisp lagers and hop-forward IPAs to rich stouts and Belgian-inspired ales.

One of our most beloved breweries is Montauk Brewing Company, whose motto you can't help but love: "Craft Beer for the End." Their flagship Wave Chaser IPA delivers bright citrus aromas with a balanced hop finish, making it an ideal companion to fresh seafood, grilled shrimp, or lobster rolls, while their Summer Ale offers equally refreshing, light malt flavors with subtle fruit notes perfect for warm afternoons.

Another East End favorite—and fun to visit—is Kidd Squid Brewing Company (sorry, no squids in the beer), the only craft brewing company in Sag Harbor. Located at 11 Spring Street in a historic 1870 railroad-freight depot, this whimsical beer garden boasts games such as bocce, creative munchies like hot pretzels made from their beer, and nitro coffees, matchas, and local vinos for the beer-shy.

Hard-core beer enthusiasts should hop (no pun intended!) on the ferry to seek out Greenport Harbor Brewing Company, with its two destinations on the North Fork. Known for its clean, balanced brewing style, Greenport Harbor produces an array of craft-beer favorites, such as its smooth Harbor Ale, its more robust Black Duck Porter with notes of chocolate, its herbal-forward Haus Pilsner, and its orange-blossom-honey-infused Summer Ale.

Now, of course, we must explore some beer cocktails. Both sound delicious.

The Hamptons Shandy

Ingredients:

- 12 oz local summer ale
- 4 oz fresh lemonade
- 1 oz vodka (optional, but definitely yes!)
- Lemon wheel and fresh mint

Fill chilled pint glass with ice, pour in lemonade, top with beer, and gently stir. Garnish with lemon and mint.

Blueberry Beach Beer Smash

Ingredients:

- 12 oz local blonde ale
- ¼ cup fresh blueberries
- Juice of half a lemon
- 1 teaspoon honey
- Fresh basil leaves

Muddle blueberries, lemon juice, honey, and basil in shaker. Fill tall glass with ice and strain mixture over it, then top with the blonde ale. Garnish with additional blueberries and basil sprig.

Whether you're sampling a fresh IPA at a local brewery, enjoying a crisp lager by the pool, or attempting to mix a creative beer cocktail for friends, our growing Hamptons craft-beer scene offers something for every palate. Let's all raise a (beer) glass to our local breweries and to an unforgettable August 2026!

DELICATO FAMILY WINES

UNCORK THE FINEST—A CENTURY-PLUS LEGACY OF ELEGANCE IN EVERY POUR

By Robyn Freedman

Courtesy of Delicato Family Wines

Established in 1924, and now marking over 102 years of uninterrupted craftsmanship, Delicato Family Wines stands as a rare expression of continuity in an ever-evolving world of fine wine. Family-owned and operated across three generations of the Indelicato family, its legacy has not just been preserved but continuously refined.

From the sun-drenched valleys of Lodi to the prestigious elevations of Napa, Sonoma, and Monterey, Delicato Family Wines cultivates more than 6,000 acres of estate vineyards across California's most coveted appellations, alongside select international sites in Germany and Chile. Each vineyard is a distinct voice in a symphony of terroir—interpreted with precision, restraint, and a deep respect for nature's rhythm.

At the pinnacle of its portfolio, the iconic Black Stallion Estate Winery captures the essence of Napa Valley elegance along the famed Silverado Trail. Here, luxury is revealed in every structured Cabernet, every layered Chardonnay, every bottle shaped by time and place.

The portfolio extends with distinction across modern classics and lifestyle icons: Gnarly Head delivers bold expression with unapologetic character, while Bota Box redefines contemporary convenience without compromising quality. Z. Alexander Brown, a collaboration with Grammy-winning artist Zac Brown, brings creative energy and soulful depth to the collection, and Earth Wise Vineyards reflects a commitment to certified organic stewardship and sustainable excellence.

Together, these wines represent more than a portfolio—they form a philosophy: a belief that wine is not simply produced like any other product, but is thoughtfully grown, carefully guided, and ultimately shared in moments of connection.

Today, Delicato Family Wines is among the fastest-growing wine companies in the U.S., yet its truest achievement remains unchanged: to craft wines that elevate life's most meaningful celebrations.

Because within every bottle lies the same enduring promise—heritage in every harvest, and elegance in every pour.
